

County budget record

Supervisors OK 22-cent hike in tax

From Our L.A. Bureau

Supervisors Friday on a 4-1 vote adopted a record $3 billion budget calling for a tax rate boost of nearly 22 cents.

If the tax hike stands up, the rate for 1975-76 would be $4.5725 per $100 of assessed valuation—the highest rate in county history.

The effect of the increase will be to boost the tax bill on an average $30,000 home by $12.54, from the current level of $250.38 to $262.92. (This is only the general fund tax bill; other levies such as school and city taxes are still to be added to the bill.)

The spending package as adopted by the board reflected a net spending reduction of some $40 million from the budget as prepared by Chief Administrative Officer Harry Hufford.

Hufford's proposed budget had called for a 40-cent hike, but supervisors managed to cut that to 21.81 cents mainly by imposing a 3.5 per cent across-the-board cut in county spending programs.

Despite the lowering of the projected rate, Supervisor Pete Schabarum cast the lone dissenting vote, saying he considered a 22-cent hike "clearly unacceptable."

He said the taxpayers "deserve something better than this," noting that he had not been given support for moves to cut $51 million from the budget which would have negated the need for a tax rate hike.

The effect of the 3.5 per cent cut was to reduce net spending by $33.2 million. However, supervisors set aside a $10 million contingency fund to be used in the event certain departments could not live with the flat cut.

The board also used $4.5 million in revenue sharing money to simply reduce the tax rate and placed the remaining $4 million revenue sharing money into a contingency fund. Officials pointed out that the tax rate as adopted by supervisors is basically an estimate because the final tax rate is not adopted until early September. The tax rate for next year has been based on an estimate that the assessed value of all property in the county will increase by 5 per cent. When Assessor

Philip Watson produces the actual assessment role in July, the increase in valuations can affect the tax rate.

If the role grows by more than 5 per cent, the tax rate will be further reduced; but if the growth rate does not reach 5 per cent the tax rate will be increased.

The budget also includes about $12 million in revenue sharing funds for distribution to community groups. Revenue sharing money totaling about $17 million also was included for transit subsidies.

$60 million ransom paid for 2 Argentines

By JONATHAN KANDELL
New York Times Service

BUENOS AIRES — A ransom of $60 million was paid for the release of two Argentine executives, according to members of the leftwing Peronist guerrillas who kidnaped them nine months ago.

The sum is believed to be the highest ransom ever paid in a kidnapping case.

The two businessmen, Juan Born and Jorge Born, heirs to one of the largest Argentine fortunes, hold ranking positions in the Bunge and Born Company, an Argentine grain-trading firm that has diversified into other fields to become the most important multinational corporation headquartered in Argentina.

Officials of Bunge and Born could not be reached immediately for comment. But spokesmen for the guerrillas, called the Montoneros, said the company had paid most of the ransom in cash.

The guerrillas made their disclosures Friday during a clandestine news conference. According to sources who attended that meeting, the Montoneros presented Jorge Born, 41, the older brother, and freed him after the conference ended.

The guerrillas said that Juan Born, 40, had been released earlier at an undisclosed location.

According to sources, the Montoneros said the $60 million would be used to build a "popular organization" and to "develop an integral war against imperialism in order to achieve national liberation."

RESTAGING his action on the House floor Friday, Rep. William S. # Demos push override of housing bill veto WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats announced Friday — and dramatized with a calendar-tearing act — a major push to override President Ford's announced veto of a housing bill.

Speaker Carl Albert told newsmen the override attempt will be made next week and "I think it will be a hard fight."

The dramatics were provided on the House floor by Rep. William S. Moorhead, D-Pa., who ripped pages off two oversize calendars while charging the Housing and Urban Development department with dragging its heels for 23 months on housing programs.

Democrats laughed, applauded and cheered Moorhead's takeoff of Ford's recent television appearance, when he used the calendar pages as a prop for his denunciation of allegedly lagging congressional action.

Ford's announcement that he will veto the bill containing subsidies for several housing programs, Moorhead said, "confirms the fact this administration has adopted the anti-housing policy of the previous occupant of 1600 Pennsylvania Ave."

While making no claim that Democrats would succeed in overriding the veto, Albert said "there are certain things on which we must make a fight."

"I realize that every time we lose one I get a

Senate OKs tax break on homes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate voted Friday night to make additional new housing available for sale under the special $2,000 tax credit program for homebuyers.

The proposed extension would allow persons who buy new homes which were under construction before Thursday to be eligible for a tax credit of 5 per cent of the cost of the house, up to a maximum of $2,000. A tax credit is an amount subtracted from taxes owed.

The provision would extend a tax feature enacted in the tax rebate law President Ford signed March 29. That law offered a tax credit to purchasers of new homes under construction before March 26, 1975.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., author of the original tax credit for homes, proposed the extension.

Democratic Headquarters. Most of the 29 months Liddy already has served — by far the longest of any Watergate convicts — was levied by Sirica for contempt of court for refusal to testify before the Watergate grand jury. "In short, this defendant has not shown the court the slightest remorse, or regret for his actions, and has not given the court even a hint of contrition or sorrow, nor has he made any attempt to compensate for his illegal actions by trying to aid our system of justice, in its search for the truth," Sirica said. The judge said Liddy was not disadvantaged or uneducated but "a well-educated man" who has been "a lawyer, an assistant district attorney, and FBI special agent, a congressional candidate, a special assistant in the Organized Section of the Treasury Department and a White House aide." Liddy, a former White House "plumber," was finance counsel for former President Richard M. Nixon's reelection committee, at the time he masterminded the Watergate break-in and was on the lookout at the time it was executed. Sirica noted that Liddy had not cooperated "even so much as to try to explain" what became of the $199,000 that the reelection committee disbursed to him prior to the break-in.

Liddy asked for a reduction of sentence May 19, after Sirica shortened the sentences of former White House counsel John W. Dean III, former deputy reelection director Jeb Stuart Magruder, and Nixon's private lawyer Herbert W. Kalmbach.

"He refused to cooperate," Sirica said of Liddy.

IRS snoop tricks, agent-use revealed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Internal Revenue Service disclosed Friday it has used undercover agents equipped with microphones concealed in tie clasps, Chap Sticks, lunch box tape recorders and body transmitters.

It also revealed it has trained more than 100 undercover men since 1963 and actually deployed more than 20 of them with the deep "cover" of a thoroughly documented false identity.

The disclosures came in two IRS internal audits presented to the House Government Operations subcommittee, an IRS oversight body now holding hearings on the performance of the federal tax collecting agency.

To congressmen wondering what business the IRS had using this type of spying, IRS Commissioner Donald C. Alexander replied that those acts were committed by overzealous agents in violation of IRS guidelines.

He said all nonaccountant investigative work by the agency's 2,700 "special agents" has been suspended until new and tighter guidelines can be issued. They had been dealing in organized crime and narcotics traffic in addition to tax matters.

An internal IRS audit conducted for the period Jan. 1, 1973, to Feb. 25, 1974, revealed that IRS agents were recording telephone conversations without proper authorization and that many "sensitive electronic surveillance devices" had not been turned back to the agency after missions.

"These items included body transmitters, an automatic telephone monitoring device capable of use for a wiretap, briefcase and lunch box tape recorders, room-type microphone bugs, pen desk set with built-in microphone, a 'drop-in' telephone microphone; and lapel, Chap Stick, inhaler, tie clasp and fountain pen microphones," the report said.

Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y., the subcommittee chairman, said "the Chap Stick connection really epitomizes" the failure of the IRS to appreciate the "public's sensitivity to dirty tricks."

But Alexander said the use of such electronic equipment had not been extensive, and Warren Bates, assistant commissioner for inspections, said those in use were "items they should not have had."

A second IRS internal audit said the agency had spent $283,264.52 in "confidential" funds on undercover projects between 1972, and 1975.

FEA let Yellow Pages do walking

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A former Federal Energy Administration auditor said Friday he got so little direction from the home office that he often had to look in the telephone book's yellow pages to figure out whom to audit next.

Donald Mitchell testified before a subcommittee looking into the effectiveness of the FEA's enforcement work.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., subcommittee chairman, said the testimony shows "there is no clearly clear direction as to what those out in the field should be doing. There is a serious question about the effectiveness of the agency in carrying through its mandate. There is frustration and confusion and a lack of clear definitive goals."

FEA chief Frank G. Zarb acknowledged in a letter to Kennedy that there have been delays and problems in the enforcement program. He blamed them on temporary regulations, the complexity of enforcing rules throughout the vast petroleum industry and "legal and other factors beyond our control."

"In spite of the fact that there have been shortcom-

Quakes plague desert 2nd day

EL CENTRO (AP) — Earthquakes continued to rattle dishes and nerves here for a second day Friday as three new quakes brought the two-day total to 20.

There were no reports of damage. The heaviest quake Friday started with a sharp bump and continued for several seconds, giving residents a long, rolling sensation.

A spokesman at Caltech in Pasadena said that quake measured 4.1 on the Richter scale, just a shade under the 4.2 reading for one of the quakes Thursday night.

The spokesman said, "That particular area seems to have earthquakes in swarms." During one four-day period in January, some 1,000 quakes were recorded.

The first temblor Friday was recorded at 2:07 a.m. and measured 2.7 on the Richter scale. The 4.1 reading came at 3:15 p.m. and was followed by a 3.2 reading at 3:49 p.m., Caltech reported.

The Richter scale is a measurement of ground motion and every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude.

More swirling sand as wind whips desert

Associated Press

The Southern California desert area was beaten by more swirling sand winds Friday.

The winds gusting to 40 miles an hour, were expected to continue through the weekend. There were traveler's warnings issued for the Antelope Valley, Mojave Desert and Coachella Valley.

Hurricane force winds of up to 90 miles an hour did $1 million damage earlier this week.

The weather picture was brighter in the Los Angeles area. The sun broke through the dreary June skies Friday, ending more than a week of thick clouds and unseasonably cool temperatures.

The National Weather Service called for clear skies through Monday in most areas, with a predicted high of 75 today in Long Beach.

No remorse, no freedom for Liddy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Declaring that G. Gordon Liddy "has not shown the slightest remorse or regret," U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica Friday refused the Watergate mastermind's plea for a reduction of his prison sentence.

Sirica, in a tough-worded six-page order, also said that if Liddy is unable to pay his $40,000 fine, he can take a pauper's oath and serve an additional 30 days.

The Supreme Court on Jan. 27 rejected Liddy's claim that Sirica failed to give him a fair trial, and Liddy returned to prison to serve remainder of his sentence of six years, eight months to 20 years for the 1972 bugging of the

Russ deploy new missile, U.S. says

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger said Friday that Russia has started deploying three powerful new intercontinental ballistic missiles, two of them with multiple warheads. Up to 50 of the missiles may already be in place, he said. Schlesinger's report indicated significant progress in new Soviet missile deployments since last January. At the same time, Schlesinger said that recent Soviet long-range missile tests into the Pacific showed that the Russians "are in the process of attaining" improved accuracy with their new family of missiles. The defense secretary said he wished the Russians showed "more restraint" in moving toward such a "contraforce" ability, which he and others have warned would increase the risk of nuclear war.

Rail strike postponed

WASHINGTON — Responding to a plea from federal mediators, the railway clerks union agreed Friday to postpone for 30 days its threatened national rail strike in hopes of reaching a settlement. But the union's president, C.L. Dennis, warned that unless management indicates a willingness to compromise, "it is difficult to see how strikes may be avoided next month." Postponement of the strike deadline to July 21 was requested by chief federal mediator W.J. Usery Jr. after an all-night bargaining session with union leaders and representatives of the major railroads. The Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks had planned to strike at 12:01 a.m. Monday when all legal delays under the Federal Railway Labor Act were to expire.

Appellate court blueprint

WASHINGTON — A congressionally authorized commission formally unveiled its blueprint for a National Court of Appeals on Friday, and its chairman said Congress will probably act on the proposal this year. President Ford said he would give the recommendations of the Commission on Revision of the Federal Appellate Court system "serious study" and was sure Congress would do the same. The commission's report, the product of an 18-month study, calls for a seven member Washington-based court appointed by the President to hear cases transferred to it from the 11 existing federal courts of appeals or referred to it by the Supreme Court. Its decisions would be subject to Supreme Court review.

SALT talks delayed

WASHINGTON — The State Department said Friday that the resumption of the strategic arms limitation talks (SALT) with the Soviet Union has been postponed "by mutual agreement" from June 23 to July 2. Officials said the Soviet Union requested the nine-day delay because the Soviet delegation to the Geneva talks needed more time for preparations on the highly technical issues now under discussion. President Ford and Leonid Brezhnev, the Soviet Communist Party's general secretary, agreed in Vladivostok in November 1974 on the broad principles of a new SALT agreement.

Prison rebels transferred

RALEIGH, N.C. — Leaders of a disturbance at a women's prison here were transferred Friday to a men's prison or put in maximum-security cells. Officials reported the prison was under control for the first time since protests began Sunday night. Sixteen guards and 21 inmates at the prison, the North Carolina Correctional Center for Women, were injured when 150 guards moved into the prison yard Thursday to end the protests. Two inmates were seriously injured and required hospital treatment. The inmates, supported on the outside by a group called Action for Forgotten Women, demanded better medical and counseling services and an end to laundry work.

$1 million loot found abandoned

MANICOUAGAN, Que. — A $1,060,000 payroll haul by three bank bandits was found in brushland Friday, and police figured the holdup men lost their cool when they discovered they had pulled off the biggest Quebec bank heist in a decade. The loot was found 24 hours after it was grabbed at a Banque Canadienne Nationale branch. Police said dogs tracked the cash, stashed in two sacks, to a spot less than 15 miles from the bank. The bank had the huge sum in its vault to pay bimonthly salaries of 1,500 Hydro-Quebec workers in this remote community located some 300 miles northeast of Quebec City.

Nuclear pact shelved

TOKYO — Prime Minister Takeo Miki's government, bowing to opposition from leftist parties, reluctantly shelved efforts Friday to win parliamentary approval for the nuclear nonproliferation treaty. But Miki and Foreign Minister Kiichi Miyazawa, aware that continuing delay will hurt Japan's international prestige, agreed to exert every effort to have the treaty ratified in the next session of parliament this fall. The ruling Liberal Democrats, who have only a slim majority in parliament, decided to drop the issue after the Socialist Party, which had expressed intention of going along with the government, backed out and rejoined the opposition last week. While the Socialists have said they approve of the treaty in principle, they and some other opposition parties argue that it needs added safeguards barring U.S. nuclear weapons from Japanese soil and prohibiting nuclear powers from supplying atomic weapons to non-nuclear states.

Mrs. Gandhi legal battle

NEW DELHI, India — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi began her legal battle to keep her job Friday and told supporters her life may be in danger. In a bitter attack on opposition parties, she accused them of trying to oust her from power "by fair or foul means." Addressing a rally of more than 100,000 backers, she declared, "The attempt to oust me is not confined to character assassination but might also be directed against my life." She did not elaborate on the alleged threat to her life. The rally assembled on a city mall to express confidence in Mrs. Gandhi as she began a legal battle to overturn a conviction of corrupt electoral practices that could force her out of office. At the prime minister's request, the Supreme Court scheduled a special hearing for Monday on her plea that she be allowed to continue as head of the government while appealing last week's verdict in her home city of Allahabad.

People in the news

Emmett Kelley upset at son's 'Weary Willie'

Combined News Services

Emmett Kelly doesn't mind his son's clowning. But Junior's trying to steal his act, Kelly says.

The famous clown, known to generations of circus-goers for his endless patience in the face of comical adversity, is angry now.

"I never gave Junior permission to copy Weary Willie's makeup or to use his name. Both the name and the picture of Willie's face are copyright," Kelly said Friday of the deadpan, silent character he has portrayed for more than 50 years.

Interviewed at his comfortable home in Sarasota, Fla., Kelly, 76, blamed 50-year-old Emmett Jr. for copying Willie's makeup and "borrowing" some of his dad's gags.

"Mostly I resent the stuff they have been putting out saying I'm retired — that hurts my career and affects my billings," Kelly said. "The story I want the public to know is that I'm not retired."

Kelly's son, appearing in the Chicago area, has billed his act as a "contemporary version of Weary Willie." Advertising has referred to Kelly Sr. as "retired and living in Florida."

A family feud has been brewing ever since Emmett Jr. decided to "take up clowning," the elder Kelly said.

Kelly Jr. has avoided being drawn into an argument, saying only that his character is similar to that made famous by his father.

"A clown's makeup and character, that's all he has to sell," Kelly Sr. said. "He loves and believes in that character. Weary Willie is very real to me."

"He's the man who has given up. The boat has gone and left him. The cards are stacked against him. He's content to make out with what he's got, but he knows he'll go no farther," Kelly said.

Kelly said he hasn't seen his son, the product of his first marriage which ended in divorce in 1935, for 15 years.

Kelly has nurtured Willie through countless circus performances, several movies, television and stage appearances. For 14 seasons, Willie was one of the headliners of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus. Now, Kelly concentrates on night club appearances when not relaxing at home.

"When we're at home, Weary Willie stays right here," Kelly said. "Weary Willie and I will never retire. We'll keep going along together as long as we can."

Cornfeld

Millionaire playboy Bernard Cornfeld failed to surrender Friday in Los Angeles on fraud charges, and a federal prosecutor said he would seek the onetime financial giant's extradition from England.

Cornfeld was indicted June 4 on charges an illegal "blue box" electronic system was used on telephones at his Los Angeles mansion to make about 343 free overseas telephone calls. About $4,000 was said to be involved.

Before his financial empire collapsed and he lost control of Investors Overseas Services in 1970, Cornfeld's personal wealth was estimated at $200 million and his conglomerate was said to control $2.5 billion.

Bypassed

Dr. Dixie Lee Ray resigned Friday as the State Department's top science official, asserting that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and other high aides had not consulted her office on key policy matters.

She joined the State Department five months ago as the first assistant secretary of oceans and international environmental and scientific affairs. The new bureau was established by Congress to give added prestige to matters within the department.

Rejected

A federal judge on Friday denied all motions for directed verdicts of acquittal for former Sen. Edward Gurney, R-Fla., and three codefendants on trial in an alleged slush-fund conspiracy.

U.S. District Judge Ben Krentzman ordered the defense to begin presenting its case Monday in Tampa.

Doctor

A Los Angeles doctor has failed in his bid to win a post in the hierarchy of the American Medical Association. The AMA is meeting in Atlantic City, N.J.

Dr. Rex Greene, 30, was easily defeated in his bid for the national AMA vice presidency by Dr. George Slagle of Battle Creek, Mich.

Stabilizer

President Ford Friday accepted "with regret and with deepest gratitude" the resignation of Albert Rees as director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability.

Rees, who has served in the post since last September, will become provost at Princeton University. He previously served as professor of economics there.

Sources say Rees will be succeeded as director of the anti-inflation agency by Michael H. Moskow, an assistant secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development for policy development and research. The council, which has a staff of 40, was established by Congress at the President's urging 10 months ago to monitor wage and price development in the economy.

Liberated

Playboy publisher Hugh Hefner, the object of a Playboy bunny picket earlier this week, said Friday in Chicago he was relaxing the rules to make "Bunny Lib a reality rather than just a slogan."

A group of bunnies picketed the Playboy building protesting work rules which they termed archaic and wrote Hefner an open letter. They charged he set the cause of "Bunny Lib" back 10 years by not allowing bunnies to date keyholders.

They also protested rules barring them from giving out their real names or coming into the Playboy Club as private citizens.

Hefner changed all that Friday, saying that from now on bunnies are honorary members of the Playboy Club and are entitled to use its facilities, free to date whomever they wish, and free to use their real names, and full names if they choose in the club.

And, in a hand-written postscript, he said "Really, Bunnies, I'm not a Male Chauvinist Rabbit and I love and respect all of you. Maybe I've been just a wee bit overprotective."

Saxe

Former student radical Susan E. Saxe, tight-lipped and manacled, was brought by U.S. marshals to Boston Friday to face charges of bank robbery and murder.

Dressed in blue jeans, Ms. Saxe was taken to the Federal Courthouse after being extradited from Pennsylvania where she had faced unrelated federal criminal charges.

The 28-year-old former Brandeis University honor student entered a guilty plea this week in Philadelphia to the looting in 1970 of a Massachusetts National Guard armory. It was part of a plea bargaining disclosed 10 days ago.

Boorstin

President Ford Friday nominated Daniel J. Boorstin, a Pulitzer Prize-winning historian, to be Librarian of Congress.

Boorstin, 60, now is senior historian at the Smithsonian Institution's Museum of History and Technology. He served as its director for four years, retiring from that post about two years ago to devote more time to writing.

He won the Pulitzer Prize for history in 1974 for "The Americans: The Democratic Experience," the third volume of a trilogy.

The position, which pays $38,500 a year, has been vacant since last Dec. 31 when L. Quincy Mumford retired after a 20-year tenure.

Segretti

Convicted political trickster Donald Segretti should be allowed to be a California attorney because any misdeeds sprang from naive service to former President Richard M. Nixon, Segretti's lawyer argued Friday in Los Angeles.

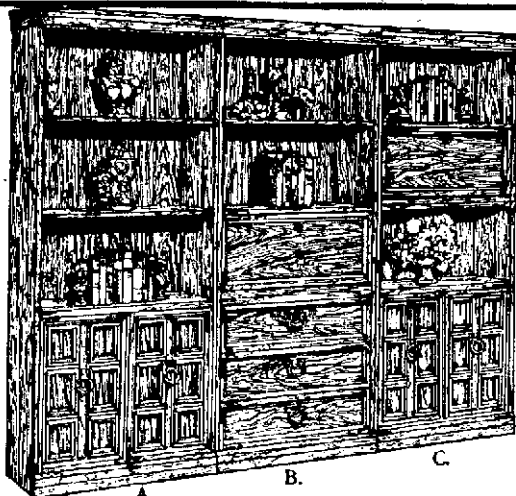

In arguments to the California Supreme Court, Segretti's attorney portrayed his client as a well-meaning Army veteran who thought his 1972 sabotage against Democrats "was approved by the President of the United States and his advisers."

P.D. for Police Day

Why were National Police Week and Police Memorial Day virtually ignored last month in Long Beach? President Ford had time to make a proclamation and cities across the country flew flags at half staff and held various ceremonies. The lack of recognition here for our men in blue is shameful. J.L.S., Long Beach.

They weren't exactly ignored. The Long Beach City Council proclaimed May 11-17 as Police Appreciation Week in conjunction with National Police Week and Lions clubs in the area feted about 200 police officers at a celebration held at the Lions' clubhouse in Belmont Shore. Officer William J. Meyer, of the Long Beach Police Department's community affairs office, said the Lions also sponsored an art contest in local high schools and gave savings bonds to 12 students who best depicted a police appreciation theme. Police Memorial Day, May 14, wasn't officially observed here but the police department sent a six-member ceremonial guard to represent it at a countywide memorial service held at the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Academy. Capt. Willis Platt, commander of the ceremonial guard, said the service included a flag raising, a prayer, the reading of names of officers killed in the line of duty during the past year and the playing of "Taps." He said all of the law enforcement officers in the country were represented there and that it was a "more impressive affair on a countywide basis" than it could have been on the local level.

I have a 30-year-old daughter who is mentally disturbed and on drugs. She has two children, ages 6 and 10, and she's lost all sense of taking care of them. The children stay with me. My daughter is willing to get help, but she refuses to be committed to a mental hospital. She's on welfare and doesn't have any money. Where can she get treatment? R.W., Bellflower.

Outpatient counseling and therapy are available in your area at the Rio Hondo Mental Health Services Center, 12000 Firestone Blvd., Norwalk, 964-2751. The fee at this clinic, which is a Los Angeles County facility, is based on the patient's ability to pay. In Long Beach, the county's mental health clinic is located at 455 W. 14th St. Your daughter also can seek help at the Long Beach Alcohol and Drug Abuse Rehabilitation Center, 125 E. Eighth St. Information on various counseling services in this area can be obtained by contacting the local branch of the Mental Health Association, 657 E. Wardlow Road, 426-6659.

How can I find a deaf mute club or league? I am deaf, over 65, on Social Security and living alone, but I am not a loner. I don't drive, I always go by bus. T.M.K., Hawaiian Gardens.

On your item on the battleship USS Alabama, I worked on the ship in the early part of 1942 in Portsmouth, Va., not Norfolk, just before my induction into the service. At that time, a rough estimate of the cost of the vessel was $1 a pound and she was to weigh 45,000 tons when completed, we were told. I greatly appreciate hearing of her enviable war record and of her rescue from the fleet's boneyard. I take pride in having had a small hand in her creation and I am happy to learn that she is now being used as a memorial. V.M., Long Beach.

Sheriff sued for treatment in jail

Associated Press

A class action suit filed in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles Friday by five youths claimed they were placed in extended isolation under arbitrary rules set by sheriff's deputies at the main Orange County jail in Santa Ana.

Named as defendants in the suit were Orange County Sheriff Brad Gates and William Wallace, chief of jail operations at the jail.

The suit, filed by two pretrial detainees and three youths awaiting sentencing, charged that the "sheriff's department engages in a continuous pattern of mental and physical harassment and abuse of pretrial detainees and convicted prisoners."

The youths charged the conditions at the jail were designed to "break their spirit and reduce them to human automats."

The plaintiffs in the suit were Craig Lee Abshier, James Chambers Lovett, Raymond Fred Garcia, Steve William Hondo, John Edward Piccerello and "all others similarly situated."

They said in their suit there are about 900 men and women prisoners in the jail, many of them awaiting trial.

The suit claimed the youths were placed in isolation for between five and 30 days for rule violations which included "unlawful smoking" in the jail and failing to obey a deputy's order.

The youths claimed they all were sent to isolation without a hearing, the decision coming from a sergeant on duty.

They said they want an end to the alleged improper practices and conditions at the jail.

State bar unit sues two L.B. 'divorce firms'

The State Bar Association has filed suit in Los Angeles courts against two Long Beach area firms through which nonlawyers give advice to persons who are filing their own divorces or dissolutions.

The suits, according to a bar statement, were filed against:

—Helen Pearce, operator of California Divorce Council, 3643 Atlantic Ave., Long Beach;

—Joan Coffman, doing business as the Southeast Divorce Council, 8041 E. Florence Ave., Downey.

The lawsuits allege that "the advertising and advisory activities of the operators added up to the unauthorized practice of law," according to the bar statement.

The statement charged that divorce-advisory businesses "interfere with the orderly administration of justice in the courts of California."

Brent Abel, president of the State bar, noted in the statement that there have been similar suits filed in California, and resolved in favor of the bar.

Teachers reject 4.5% wage offer

Long Beach teachers were offered—and immediately rejected—a 4.5 per cent wage increase for the fiscal year beginning July 1 during negotiations with Board of Education representatives Friday.

Anne Tubridy, chairwoman of the Certificated Employees' Council which acts as the bargaining agent for the Long Beach Unified School District's 2,300 teachers, said Friday's wage offer was the first made by the district since negotiations began several months ago.

SHE ADDED that while it was the council that rejected the offer, the decision was unanimous among representatives of the district's three teachers' unions, Teachers Association of Long Beach, Professional Educators of Long Beach and the American Federation of Teachers.

She said the teachers presented their proposal—which calls for a 12 per cent wage hike—to the board last May. Teachers

Hearing set in 'vigilante death'

Associated Press

Eight alleged vigilantes, charged with hurling a man off a cliff to his death after they "convicted" him of stealing a television set, face preliminary court hearings next Wednesday in Los Angeles.

The eight, who include two women, were arraigned Thursday on charges including murder and kidnapping, the district attorney's office said Friday.

They were booked earlier in the week after the body of Joseph Arce, 26, Gardena, was found on rocks at the base of a 250-foot cliff at the Pacific Ocean near Marineland.

Sheriff's deputies said 10 neighbors in all from the nearby Lawndale area allegedly had carried out vigilante-style "arrests" and "trial" after a television set was stolen from Delores Whalley.

The supposed "thief"—Arce—was thrown to his death from the top of the cliff, the deputies said. The vigilantes "acquitted" and released two other persons they had kidnapped from their homes, deputies said.

Officials did not say how they found out about the alleged incident. They were also withholding identities of the two "innocent" others.

Deputies said they were also are seeking increased medical, dental and eye-care benefits and $500-per-year pay increases when teachers reach their 18th, 21st and 24th anniversaries with the district.

Mrs. Tubridy said the board's representatives proposed to leave medical and dental-care benefits as they are and rejected the anniversary payment plan.

SHE SAID the district currently buys medical coverage for teachers and their dependents and dental coverage for teachers only. The teachers have asked that the board pick up the tab for medical, dental and eye care for teachers and their dependents.

Negotiations are scheduled to resume Tuesday, she added.

In the meantime, the board is scheduled to discuss and possibly approve salary packages for classified (noncertificated) personnel during its meeting Monday, Mrs. Tubridy said.

continuing to look for two others supposedly with the alleged vigilantes. Officers said they would withhold those identities until and unless the two missing persons were booked.

The preliminary hearing will determine whether there is enough evidence to go to trial in Superior Court, although they have been formally charged, and the allegations were read to them at the arraignment.

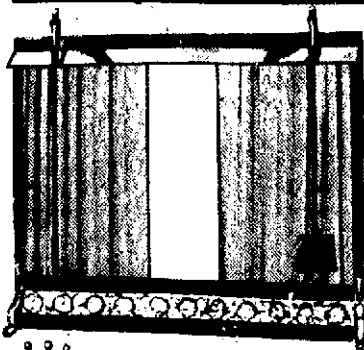

Charged are the apparent TV owner, Mrs. Whalley, 28; her ex-husband, Robert Whalley, 30, both of Lawndale; Paula Boyer, 22, Redondo Beach; Daryl Fannin, 23, Lawndale; James Nemeth, 18, Lancaster; Gordon Brucker, 34, Lawndale; Mark Crawford, 21, Carson, and Gary Aman, 18, El Segundo.

Senate kills Brown environmental plan

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Senate Friday handed Gov. Brown a political setback and killed his plan to create a new government Environmental Quality Agency administered by one of his closest advisers.

On a 21-4 vote, the Senate approved without debate a motion by Democratic Sen. Alfred Alquist, D-San Jose, to reject the reorganization plan. Twelve Republicans joined nine Democrats to defeat it.

If either the Senate or Assembly votes to reject a gubernatorial reorganization plan, it is dead.

Brown's office had no comment on the development.

"It's a bad plan," said Alquist. "It would proliferate the bureaucracy."

Under the proposal, the air, water and solid waste pollution-fighting efforts of the state would be consolidated under a new Environmental Quality Agency. Currently, those functions are under the Resources Agency.

The Air Resources Board was proposed by Brown for replacement by a Department of Air Quality. The Solid Waste Management Board would have become a new department while the state Water Resources Control board and its nine regional boards would have been retained.

A. Thomas Quinn, chairman of the Air Resources Board and Brown's cabinet-level adviser on environmental protection, was in line to become the proposed agency's secretary. His confirmation by the Senate has been held up pending disposition of the reorganization plan.

Alquist, an outspoken critic of the proposal, noted that Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post had estimated it would cost between $300,000 and $500,000 in the first year alone to operate what would have become the fifth "super" agency of state government.

"I could see no justification for it whatsoever," Alquist said. "It would further centralize power in the executive branch, which I oppose."

He told newsmen that basically everything that would be performed by the new agency already is being done by the Resources Agency, except that under Brown's proposal the power of existing boards would be "taken away" and given to Quinn.

Brown to cut criminal justice planning staff

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Brown called the state Office of Criminal Justice Planning a "pretzel palace" and backed a move Friday to cut its staff from 229 to 10 or 12 persons.

After he met with the California Council on Criminal Justice, which oversees the planning office, Brown told reporters the office's staff would be cut "as soon as we can humanely reduce it."

During his encounter with the 27-member council, Brown struck out verbally at bureaucracy, paper blizzards and planning for the sake of planning in the crime-fighting arena.

"We are spending more and more money discussing what we should be doing instead of being out there on the street corner," the Democratic governor told law enforcement people on the council.

Some council members asked him to delay chopping the office staff, but Brown responded at one point:

"If people don't understand something, I don't think we should do it, and I can't understand OCJP. I tried. I spent 20 hours trying to thread through that pretzel palace."

Brown said the planning office, charged with reviewing local grants seeking federal crime-fighting monies, had failed to cut crime and had become a bureaucratic maze since its creation in the late 1960s.

"One of the things we're not doing is reducing crime," he said. "Let's not kid ourselves."

Earlier, Brown's executive secretary, Gray Davis, told Brown the staff should be cut because there was no proof the office "justified the enormous public expense or the incredible bureaucratic delay."

Brown's office said streamlining the state's criminal justice planning operation would save between $3 million and $3.5 million.

Brown said federal crime money should be funneled directly to local governments instead.

Hopes dim for bargaining bill

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A weary Assembly Ways and Means Committee Friday gave up trying to rush passage of a major collective-bargaining bill for 1.5 million California public employees, an action that dimmed hopes for its enactment this year. However, supporters refused to concede the battle was over and said they would explore other procedural alternatives that might be invoked to keep "viable" the compromise mediated by Gov. Brown.

The committee faced a Friday deadline for acting on the omnibus legislation if the proposal were to take effect on Jan. 1, 1976. Action after Friday means the bill technically could not take effect until 1977.

Assemblyman Howard Berman, D-Beverly Hills, a chief Assembly sponsor of the bill, said possible options would be to obtain a waiver of the legislative rules or amend the provisions into related bills which already have met the deadlines.

Another alternative could be the calling of a special session by Brown.

"To those of you here in the audience, I'm incredibly sorry this happened," Berman said when it became apparent there were not the committee votes present to approve the bill.

The committee, which has met steadily for almost three days with deadline backlogs, was plagued by absenteeism and as the dinner hour approached was barely able to keep a 10-member quorum.

The Assembly setback was a virtual rerun of a Senate Finance Committee hearing Thursday when an identical version of the bill also ran into a stone wall and deliberations were postponed until after a scheduled July vacation.

Bill on pay boosts for state officials gains

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation that could assure the governor, lawmakers and other top state officials of a pay raise each year cleared the Senate Finance Committee Friday on an 8-0 vote.

The proposed constitutional amendment by Sen. Newton Russell, R-Tujunga, would strip lawmakers of the power to increase their own salaries and transfer it to the state Personnel Board.

Additionally, the measure would erase the salaries set by the constitution for elected statewide officers such as the governor and direct the board to establish their pay once a year.

HOWEVER, the salary, expense allowance, pension benefits and other compensation of an elected official could not be reduced during his term of office. Conceivably, the Personnel Board could increase his compensation each year or hold it at the same level.

The proposal also would empower the board to set the retirement benefits of new legislators, but it could do nothing that would impair the vested pension rights of current or former lawmakers.

Subject to voter approval, the revision would take effect next June 1. It would not cross the desk of Gov. Brown.

Currently, the Legislature is prohibited by the Constitution from increasing the $21,120 annual salary of its members by more than 5 per cent a year. The salaries of the governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general, treasurer, controller and superintendent of public instruction are fixed by the Constitution.

THE Personnel Board, appointed by the governor, makes recommendations to him and the Legislature on salaries for the state civil service work force. It has no power to enforce the recommendations.

Russell, who has said the plan is aimed at helping to restore public confidence in government, told the committee that "people now mistrust everything the Legislature does, unfortunately."

No witnesses testified for or against the measure, but John Caffrey, representing the Brown administration, said Brown's Cabinet opposed it on grounds that the compensation of elected officials should not be determined by an independent agency.

In deciding the compensation payable to the officials, the board would be required to consider such things as changes in the cost of living, "the nature and responsibilities" of legislators, and the salaries of county supervisors, members of Congress and of legislators in other states of "similar size and complexity."

The board also would examine the salaries paid

Malpractice bill voted, hit by MDs

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A major Democratic-sponsored medical malpractice insurance bill was passed by the Assembly Friday and branded by doctors as "totally inadequate."

The California Society of Anesthesiologists, which sparked a statewide doctors strike last month, said the bill by Assemblyman Barry Keene, D-Eureka, would not solve the problem of rising premium rates and would leave its members unable to continue working.

Fred Ackerman of the California Medical Society also had complaints with the bill during testimony before the Senate Insurance and Financial Institutions Committee Thursday night.

HE QUOTED figures from the firm of Johnson and Higgins, insurance brokers for the Los Angeles County Medical Society, which showed that premium rates would not be lowered by enactment of the bill. The CMA said it hoped the bill would be strengthened when it was heard by the Senate.

The medical association had been one of the bill's major supporters.

Henry Greene, a spokesman for the anesthesiologists, told a news conference, "We are not warning anyone, but if we can't get insurance at affordable premiums, we can't practice."

Greene said the Assembly bill is "totally inadequate" and had been "altered and amended to the point that it would not accomplish its purpose."

Keene issued a statement urging Southern California doctors, who also expressed dissatisfaction with the measure, to "cool it" and wait and see what might occur in the Senate.

"It does not well serve the political process to inflame the public or to appear to try to blackjack legislators into a particular course of action," the assemblyman said.

THE KEENE bill was approved by the Assembly Thursday on a 65-8 vote, but it was prevented from going to the Senate until Friday so further amendments could be considered.

In its Friday session, the Assembly defeated a proposed amendment by Assemblyman Lawrence Kapiloff, D-San Diego, to increase Medi-Cal reimbursements to doctors. He argued that one problem facing physicians was low reimbursement rates for treating Medi-Cal patients.

The amendment was defeated on a 19-48 vote after a lengthy floor fight, and then the bill was then sent to the Senate by a 65-8 margin.

Meantime, the doctors' groups, which had demanded a special session of the Legislature to speed passage of malpractice reforms, suggested that lawmakers go ahead and take a planned July vacation to give extra time to study the Keene bill and a score of other proposals.

Senate President Pro Tem James R. Mills, D-San Diego, and Assembly Speaker Leo T. McCarthy earlier had indicated the vacation might be postponed if major malpractice bills were not passed by the end of next week.

THE physician's request for more time emphasized the special session was "a mistake from the beginning," said Mills.

The Keene bill would place limits on fees of attorneys in malpractice cases and give the state insurance commissioner authority to control premium rate increases of more than 10 per cent.

Rocky, Kissinger said Colby foes

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS News said Friday night that Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger favor the dismissal of William E. Colby, director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

The network quoted a high official in the Ford Administration as saying Rockefeller regards Colby as "a weak person who lacks strength of character" and should not be in a major government office.

CBS said the administration official, not identified, said Colby went before the Senate committee investigating the CIA "with the idea: Tell me what you want me to tell you about the CIA and I'll say it."

CBS further quoted the official as saying Rockefeller and Kissinger and other unnamed high administration officials wanted Colby fired "as soon as possible," perhaps after he completes his testimony before Congressional investigating committees.

Lumumba 'no target of CIA'

By NICHOLAS M. HORROCK

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency investigated whether it should assassinate Patrice Lumumba, the Congo leader, in 1960, but rejected the idea as an unwise and unnecessary operation, authoritative intelligence sources said Thursday.

According to one source, an experienced senior intelligence officer was assigned by an agent cy superior to "examine the possibilities of assassinating Mr. Lumumba," made a study of the feasibility and later recommended against it. The planning went no further.

EXCLUSIVE
N.Y. TIMES SERVICE

"IT NEVER got beyond that stage at the agency," the source said. The plan was never proposed to the National Security Council or the White house by the CIA, he added.

Lumumba was deposed as premier of the Congo (now called Zaire) in December, 1960, and taken as a prisoner to Leopoldville. On Feb. 9, 1961, the central government authorities announced that he had escaped with two companions. On Feb. 13 the government said that Lumumba had been murdered by Congolese tribesmen.

The Soviet Union and the United Arab Republic charged in the United Nations that his death was the act of agents supported by the Belgian Government, which controlled the Congo until independence was granted in 1960.

An authoritative U.S. intelligence source said the American government had nothing to do with Lumumba's death, but he acknowledged that the United States had secretly supplied material support to Lumumba's enemies.

THE assassination study was unearthed in 1973 when the CIA began an internal inquiry into wrongdoing. It has been described to the staff of the Rockefeller commission and the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

"It appeared to me," one source said, "that this case established there was no need to get White House approval before the agency examined assassi-

Panel clears CIA in death of Diem

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a day of secret hearings, the Senate Intelligence Committee has found no evidence of direct CIA involvement in the 1963 assassination of South Vietnamese President Ngo Dinh Diem. Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., said Friday.

"One thing is clear," said Tower, vice chairman of the committee, "any notion of American participation in the assassination of Diem was rejected."

TOWER added the committee needs to question more witnesses before determining whether there was any indirect involvement in Diem's death.

In wake of Giancana slaying

CIA probers may protect witnesses

LEWISTON, Idaho (AP) — Sen. Frank Church, chairman of the committee investigating the Central Intelligence Agency, said Friday the committee will consider protecting its witnesses, following the shooting death of reputed mobster Sam Giancana.

But the Idaho Democrat said he would give "no credence" to any suggestion that the CIA was in any way connected with the death of Giancana Thursday night.

Giancana, 65, a reputed leader in the Chicago crime syndicate, was linked recently to alleged CIA plots to kill Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro and was scheduled to appear before the committee next week. He was found shot to death in his home in the Chicago suburb of Oak Park.

no motive for murdering Giancana because the committee "already is in possession of the facts and we have other sources."

Giancana was found in the basement-kitchen of his home by a caretaker. The dapper, underworld leader, who started his career as Al Capone's wheelman and dated singer Phyllis McGuire in recent years, was shot six times.

The small-caliber bullets used in the shooting, however, are unlike most of those in mob slayings and could indicate that Giancana was killed in a personal vendetta, some detectives said. Others said they believed Giancana was under heavy pressure because of the grand jury investigation.

Investigators portrayed the aging and ailing Gian-cana as fearful of a possible prison term for perjury and perhaps ready to use mob secrets to bargain for his freedom.

Police said the .22-caliber slugs that killed Giancana — five in the neck and one in the mouth — are small compared to those usually used in mob assassinations but noted the similarity of the slaying to that of another underworld figure.

Oak Park police Chief Wilbur Reichert observed that Anthony J. Battaglia, 61, was fatally shot in the neck April 29 outside his suburban home with small caliber bullets fired at close range. He was the brother of Sam Battaglia, who is believed to have succeeded Giancana as leader of the Chicago crime syndicate several years ago.

Peter F. Vaira, head of the Justice Department strike force in Chicago, said, "It doesn't look like it is an official Mafia hit ... and the manner in which it's done leads us to believe it may have been something personal ..."

Oak Park police said six .22-caliber shells were scattered on the floor.

Chief Wilbur Reichert said, "It seems like a professional hit but the small caliber of the gun bothers us." Gangland slayings often are committed with shotguns or large-caliber weapons.

About $1,400 in cash, mostly $100 bills, was found on the body, Reichert said, discounting robbery as a motive for the shooting.

Reichert also said that Giancana apparently knew his killer and admitted him to the basement of his home.

Vaira said Giancana made appearances in December and February before a grand jury investigating organized crime but doubted his testimony was connected with his murder.

CIA 'plants' in women's groups feared

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Feminist Betty Friedan said Friday that the Central Intelligence Agency probably has infiltrated the women's movement.

"The CIA infiltrated the Indian and student movements," Ms. Friedan told a news conference at the Women's Year conference here. "It only stands to reason they have infiltrated us."

She made the comment in response to accusations by some women's groups that Gloria Steinem, another American women's liberationist, is connected with the CIA.

Ms. Friedan said she did not know if Ms. Steinem had been associated with the CIA, "but if she was, I doubt if she was the only one."

Mexico's attorney general, Pedro Ojeda Paullada, was elected president of the conference. Ms. Friedan termed the election of the man "very sad. It's pitiful that no government delegation raised hell about it. It's an insult to all the women in the world that no Mexican woman could head the conference. It's amazing in the land of machismo to even have a women's conference here."

Ojeda Paullada is the leader of the Mexican delegation at the two-week conference that began Thursday.

An Australian delegate to the conference earlier attacked Mexican President Luis Echeverria's contention that a new economic order in the world is necessary to liberate women.

"We women will no longer be relegated either here or in our own countries to a secondary place while 'hard' politics are being discussed as distinct from 'soft' women's issues," said the Australian delegate, Elizabeth Reid, in remarks prepared for a keynote address.

MRS. ANWAR SADAT, wife of Egypt's president, gets a congratulatory kiss from Mrs. Imelda Marcos, wife of the president of the Philippines, after the former's speech at conference of women.

Echeverria told Thursday's opening session of the two-week conference that there must be a new economic balance between the rich and poor nations before there can be any attack on discrimination against women.

"It seems clear to us that women throughout the world want action now, and that this can be achieved with present resource limitations and boundaries and by a resetting our priorities," the Australian said.

She said Echeverria's opening address was very interesting, especially his elaboration on the "marginality of women in society."

Echeverria's demand for a new international economic order is an integral issue at the women's conference. But what is disturbing to the Australian and others, she said, is that there is little attention paid to the role of women in achieving a radical redistribution of wealth.

"THERE must be a recognition that economic and social justice for women must go hand in hand with overall economic progress," she said.

"Women's involvement in establishing the new economic order must be more than mere vague exhortations, insincere rhetoric and token gestures," she said.

"The specific problems and experiences of women, including the poorest and least articulate, must be understood," she said. "If this is to be with honesty it means asking and involving women themselves."

Sex discrimination in higher education told

WASHINGTON (AP) — Systematic sex discrimination is pervasive throughout higher education in the United States, a House education subcommittee was told Friday.

Dr. Jean Simmons, president of the Federation of Organizations for Professional Women, told the subcommittee that "every official institutional self-study that we know of has documented the existence of policies and practices that deny women full and equal opportunity to discuss their talents."

DESPITE the documentation, Dr. Simmons said, those institutions continue to receive hundreds of millions of federal dollars to support a variety of educational programs and activities.

She said the federal government in fiscal 1973 obligated $3.8 billion to universities, colleges and nonprofit research institutions.

"The largest research and development monies are going to fields that have traditionally been the worst offenders in denying equal opportunity to women — the life sciences, physical sciences and engineering," she said.

Dr. Simmons urged the Congress to implement immediately new federal regulations designed to provide equal opportunity for women in the nation's colleges and universities.

She said Congress enacted the law three years ago and "it did not say this law will take effect only if it is convenient, only if it does not hurt anyone's revenues, or only if it does not rock the boat."

SHE ALSO said the federation is aware that compliance may not be easy.

"It will require changing traditional attitudes and policies, reconsidering resource allocations and re-evaluating the impact of institutional programs and policies on equal opportunities for both male and female students," she said.

"But the test of equity has never been convenience. The test of equal opportunity has never been impact on revenues or even impact on programs we have emotional ties to."

"The test of equal opportunity must be whether all affected persons are given a fair and reasonable opportunity to participate in and benefit from programs and activities receiving federal support," said Dr. Simmons.

Million offered to benefit women

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Princess Ashraf Pahlavi of Iran announced Friday that she had donated $1 million to the United Nations to improve the status of women, while Britain pledged about $1.5 million over the next three years to aid women in poor countries.

Princess Ashraf said she gave a check for $1 million Thursday to United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim. Half is for the fund supporting International Women's Year and the other half is to help create an institute for research and information on the status of women in Asia and the Pacific.

The princess said she would give a second $1 million if the conference approves Iran's proposal to set up an international institute of research and information for the advancement of women.

Dr. Shirley Summerhill, a member of parliament and Britain's keynote speaker at the conference, disclosed her government's pledge in her speech to the delegates, saying the money should be "used specifically to help women in the poorest countries, and especially rural women."

She said it should be spent "on new projects in fields of health, education, and cooperatives."

Women beat DWP policy on premiums

United Press International

It is unlawful to require women to pay more for their company's retirement benefits just because they live longer, a federal court judge said Thursday.

U.S. District Court Judge Harry Pregerson made the ruling in connection with a civil suit filed two years ago by five women employees of the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power, who protested the company's practice of requiring women employees to pay more money into the retirement fund than men.

Pregerson said it was an unlawful employment practice under the Equal Employment Opportunity Act of 1972 and ordered the DWP to reimburse its women employees for their overpayments, plus a 7 per cent interest.

Some 2,000 women are affected by the ruling.

Ban denied on Contraceptives a way of life in China cooking spray

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, denied by a 3-to-2 vote Friday a petition seeking a ban on the cooking spray Pam, which has been associated with the deaths of 50 teen-agers.

The petition was filed by the PAM Club of Churchville, N.Y., comprised of parents, some of whose children were victims of intentional sniffing of the aerosol.

The commission majority held that Pam is a food additive regulated by the Food and Drug Administration and that it has no jurisdiction over foods, drugs, cosmetics and pesticides.

For that reason, the majority said, the commission also denied two other parts of the petition seeking federal bans on any aerosol containing Freon 11 and 12 fluorocarbon propellants or any aerosol associated with more than three inhalation deaths.

The FDA requires warning labels on certain aerosols but has taken no action against Pam.

Chairman Richard O. Simpson and Commissioner Lawrence Kushner dissented in the commission decision.

Commissioner R. David Pittle, who broke the 2-to-2 tie vote that developed last week while he was out of the country, said he reluctantly concluded that the FDA has jurisdiction over Pam.

"I am not convinced that warning labels will be effective in reducing the number of deaths from intentional inhalation of aerosols," Pittle said, noting that the FDA will require aerosol labels sometime in the future advising of sniffing hazards.

"It is my hope," he said, "that after the FDA is provided with all the data this commission has gathered it will re-evaluate the efficacy of labeling."

The commission estimates that aerosols are associated with about 125 deaths and thousands of injuries annually.

The commission refused to disclose its votes on other aerosol petitions concerning health and environmental issues until sometime next week.

Female priests' pastor penalized

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — An Episcopal court Friday unanimously found Rev. L. Peter Beebe guilty of disobeying his bishop but recommended only that he be admonished for permitting women priests to celebrate Communion in his church.

This is the lightest penalty available, but the court also recommended that Beebe be suspended if he does not follow his bishop's warning to refrain from future violations.

The five-member court said the "essentially unjust" exclusion of women from the priesthood and the sincerity of Beebe "greatly mitigated" his offenses. The court recommended that the admonition be lifted at the end of the 1976 general church convention even if the convention fails to change Church law granting the priesthood to women.

The 30-year-old pastor of Christ Episcopal church in Oberlin was charged with having broken his ordination vows by disobeying the "godly admonition" of Bishop John H. Burt, and with breaking Church law by permitting two women to celebrate Communion last Dec. 8.

The women, Rev. Allison Cheek of Annandale, Va., and Rev. Carter Heyward of New York City, were among 11 whose July 29, 1974, ordination in Philadelphia subsequently was ruled irregular and improper by the Church's House of Bishops.

During a three-day trial in Akron last May, Beebe contended the ordination vow he took to obey the Bible was higher than that to obey his bishop. He also maintained that permitting the women to serve as priests was a matter of following his conscience.

Efforts failed during the trial to have the church court hear testimony that the use of pronouns of masculine gender in the canons, such as "he," were generic and not a demarcation of sex.

Burt, who testified at the court's invitation, said priests must abide by their bishops' godly admonitions even when such instructions violate conscience. He also said he saw neither Biblical nor doctrinal reasons why women cannot become priests but that Church law must be obeyed even though it may discriminate against women.

Beebe argued that women priests should be recognized.

HE JOINED in their celebrating communion at his Oberlin church on the eve of his trial, and women also conducted the service in a park near the trial site each day at noon as the trial went along.

In a similar trial preceding that of Beebe, Rev. William A. Wendt of Washington, D.C., was found to have violated Church law in allowing an irregularly ordained woman priest to lead a communion service in his church.

The court in that case also recommended the least severe penalty, that he be admonished.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — "Have you taken your pill?" is said to be a common cry in People's China, where nearly a quarter of the earth's estimated four billion population lives.

Reporting this, Peking-born novelist and surgeon Han Suyin says birth control and taking of the pill in China are community responsibilities rather than private affairs of the bedroom.

"In the fields and communes they have a system whereby one woman is responsible every day for calling out to the others, have you taken your pill?" she said in an interview circulated by the United Nations Educational, Social and Cultural Organization.

The responsible woman "carries supplies with her and if somebody has forgotten, they get their pill. This is solidarity. You can't do it by order, but only when the population is pulling together," added Dr. Han, author of "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing" and other novels with Chinese settings.

By contrast, only one in four women in France use contraceptives, and old taboos, government indifference and prejudice or ignorance among French doctors are to blame, family planning specialists in Paris say.

As a result, Lucien Neuwirth, the parliamentarian who pushed through a bill in 1967 to make contraception legal in France, is founding a national contraception committee to promote education on the subject.

Dr. Han, 58, now lives in Lausanne, Switzerland, but she has made numerous visits to China and done research there on the population question.

UNESCO distributed her insights on birth control and the status of women in China in an International Women's Year project.

In Shanghai, she said, women use "paper pills" — chemically impregnated paper resembling a block of 30 postage stamps, one for each day of the month.

Family planning started in 1956 in Chinese cities but only three or four years ago in the communes, "where 85 per cent of the people live," Dr. Han said.

It is "carried out street by street and village by village. Women teach other women."

"They get together and decide how many children should be born that year in that particular street. Supposing they feel the street should have only five children that year and there are seven prospective mothers. There will always be two volunteers to say I'll wait till next year."

"If a woman disagrees, nothing is done to coerce her. But someone else will have to sacrifice for her and she will feel bad about it."

Dr. Han said abortion is freely available, with the decision solely that of the mother. But contraception and late marriage are more common methods of birth control in China than abortion, she said.

Rate of plague as high as last year

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The rate of bubonic plague cases in the United States is running at about the same relatively high level as last year but there's no chance of an epidemic, federal health authorities reported Friday.

The previously reported death of a 17-month-old Ventura, Calif., girl last month was the fourth confirmed case of plague in the country in 1975, according to the Center for Disease Control, an Atlanta-based arm of the U.S. Public Health Service.

THE other three persons affected by the disease survived. Two other cases have been reported in Arizona this year, but they have not been confirmed yet by laboratory tests.

Seven or eight cases of plague were reported in the United States last year, and one person died, according to Dr. Arnold Kaufmann of the CDC.

"That was a big year," he said.

However, Kaufmann said there is little likelihood of a major outbreak of plague. He said the disease is widespread in Western states among wild rodents such as ground squirrels and prairie dogs, but "the potential for transmission to humans is low."

Fleas sometimes spread the disease from rodents to humans, but it has been limited to rural areas in recent years, he said. The last outbreak of plague in an American city was in Los Angeles in 1920, Kaufmann said.

IN ITS weekly report, the center also said that 17 youngsters in Boston, Mass. contracted hepatitis in February when they ate ice or drank water at a skating pond.

Investigators found that the water for the playground skating rink came from a brook which had been contaminated.

GARDENING

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

Chrysanthemums or mums planted now will bloom in the fall. The wise gardener carefully selects some that flower in early fall, some that bloom a little later, are those which will bloom late in the fall into January. Such a balanced selection provides continuing color from October through the new year.

Non-flowering plants usually are small when in plant bands. Some may be found in containers. The blooming ones (in four-inch pots or larger) have been forced, which means they aren't flowering during their natural season which is fall. They won't blossom again this fall season, but next year will flower during their natural blooming period (in the fall).

Large mums that are obtainable in bloom throughout the year are also forced ones. There are four or five individual plants in a pot. The faded bloom branches should be cut back only to where there are four to six good leaves remaining. Those leaves help to cushion the shock of separating the individual plants from the clump when planting them in a sunny garden. The leaves also encourage quicker re-rooting of plants in the ground.

Mums in the garden from last year are continuing to grow taller. Gardener should cut them back to within a foot of the ground, except large exhibition-commercial types. The new growth tops should be pinched out when the branches have developed four to six leaves. Secondary growth develops from the pinching.

Feed the established mums at three to four week intervals until the buds form. Don't let your plants suffer from lack of moisture.

Dahlias need a lot of water, but not late in the afternoon or evening because they are susceptible to mildew. Leaf miners are minute worm-like larvae that burrow into the leaves, and eat their tissue as they form erratic shaped tunnels. The leaf miners also work in cineraria leaves.

ROSARIANS use a specific liquid systemic to control thrips, white flies, MUMS . . . plant now for fall.

spider mites, and other sap-sucking insects. Though the leaf miners are chewing insects it might work on the leaf miners, too. Rosarians should apply the liquid systemic form three weeks in a row. No more spraying again until four to six weeks later. They will be happy with the results. Also, be sure to check with your nurseryman for dahlia use.

Stone fruits such as peaches, nectarines and apricots whose fruit is a quarter-inch or larger, and thickly clustered, should be thinned out. Thin the apricots an inch or more apart, the other two kinds of fruits should be thinned from two to three inches apart.

The trees should be irrigated if they need water — whether bearing fruit or not. Mature trees, that is trees five years or older, should be irrigated four feet deep.

L.A. Fern and Exotic Plant Show dates set

Volunteers of the Los Angeles International Fern Society are enthusiastic as they make plans for the 12th Annual Fern and Exotic Plant Show.

Each member of the "show committee" is a backyard expert in raising lush green ferns and exotic shade plants.

Don't be alarmed if a small percentage of the leaves throughout the rose bushes turn yellow and drop off. It is a natural condition which usually occurs after a crop of roses has finished blooming and the growth and buds are developing.

Roses that weren't top dressed with manure (after they were pruned during the winter) should be mulched with an inch of that material. The manure provides a mild feeding, saves on watering, and helps to retain moisture longer. The material filters into the soil, breaks up the soil crust, and allows the water to better penetrate the soil.

Rosarians believe in watering roses to about 20 inches deep, instead of frequent lighter waterings. The deeper waterings help to leach possible salt-alkali buildup in the soil.

For six months they meet regularly to pool their collective talents to stage the country's largest display of ferns and fern 'go-with' plants.

THE committee has selected July 19 and 20 at the County Fairgrounds in Pomona to stage the two-day event.

Co-chairmen of the committee are John Brunton and Larry McCullah. Together they head a key committee of ornamental horticulturists, nurserymen, botany and plant instructors, hobbyists with greenhouses and beginning gardeners.

THERE are still openings for individual displays of ferns and exotic plants, commercial exhibits, educational displays, and entries by high school and college horticultural classes as a school project.

You do not have to be a member of the Fern Society to enter. Unusual plants and publications may be purchased at the show. Further information may be obtained by contacting Wilbur Olson, research director, L.A. International Fern Society, 2423 Burrill Ave., Redondo Beach, Cal., 90278.

Pesticide poisons 16 fruit pickers

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Sixteen workers picking fruit in a Tulare County orange grove apparently suffered pesticide poisoning and had to be treated at a Visalia hospital, state officials said Friday.

The State Department of Food and Agriculture said the incident took place last week in a grove owned by the Kaweah Lemon Co. in Lemon Grove.

The flies have it

A single pair of flies, starting in April, could produce by August, 191,010,000,000,000,000,000 offspring. In the theoretical possibility that they all lived, the entire earth would be buried under a layer of flies 47 feet deep.

Couple escapes welfare roll in plants, flowers

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (U) — Lloyd and Cory Merriman are busy this spring planting flowers and vegetables, a business which took them off the welfare rolls seven years ago.

The Merrimans, operators of the Clifton Greenhouse near here, expect to sell 20,000 boxes of flowers and vegetables to wholesalers this year.

"We got started more or less accidentally," Mrs. Merriman recalls. "We were on welfare and needed some vegetables for our own use." They became so encouraged by the sales profits from their first tomato yield that it became their livelihood.

PRIOR to opening their store in 1968, the Merrimans had been employees at a seed company, but illness forced the husband off the job. With children to care for, the family had to live on disability benefits and welfare.

From a small building their meager enterprise thrived. Friends, family and neighbors helped with store deliveries, which were made in a 1949 car.

In the first year of business, the family was able to pay off many of its debts. They began a second addition to the greenhouse, which eventually surrounded the main store. Five more additions were built on a one-acre plot by 1972, housing the "biggest assortment of house plants in Colorado," the Merrimans say.

"ANY SEED I can get hold of, I grow it," says Mrs. Merriman. Many of her house plants are grown from seed, including a variety of cactus.

CORY MERRIMAN works with flowers and vegetables in her Grand Junction greenhouse.

During the spring, the Merrimans hire additional part-time employees to plant and make deliveries to nearly 20 western Colorado and mountain communities.

The Merrimans say their secret for selling healthy plants is in "just doing what has to be done for them." Mrs. Merriman says she doesn't enlist modern-day practices of talking softly to plants, but she can be found stroking their leafy limbs as she talks to customers. Tomatoes, coleus, pepperomias, cactus, and ivy are among the store's biggest sellers. "We make a good living," she says.

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

JUNE 23-29, 1975

Stay up late to celebrate summer's most beautiful moon. For some darn reason, roosters crow loudest now . . . "Jersey Joe" Wolcott KO'd by Joe Louis June 28, 1948 . . . Full moon June 23 . . . Trees stop their annual growth now . . . Average length of days for the week, 15 hours, 18 minutes . . . Donut hole invented June 27, 1849 in Camden, Vt. . . Telephone first exhibited at Philadelphia's Centennial Exhibition, June 25, 1876 . . . That which is well done is twice done.

Old Farmer's Riddle: For what kind of people does the bakery make bread out of yeast and shoe polish? (Answer below.)

Ask the Old Farmer: My mother used to say that I often was in a "snit." To this day, I don't really know what it means. F. A., Tampa, Florida.

In a snit means in a tantrum. Snit is the old-time word for tantrum, sometimes said of a gale of wind.

Home Hint: Prevent socks from picking up lint in the washing machine or dryer by tucking them into an old nylon stocking. Tie a knot in the top of these nylons and toss them into the machine . . . Riddle answer: For people who want to rise and shine.

Plea to save British lecturer disregarded

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Uganda's President Idi Amin "apparently turned his back Friday on an appeal by Britain's Queen Elizabeth II to spare the life of a retired British lecturer who called Amin a "village tyrant."

Radio Uganda quoted Amin as saying the only person who could save Denis Cecil Hills was British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan. Callaghan so far has refused to negotiate with Amin "under duress."

"The presence in Uganda of Mr. Callaghan is absolutely necessary before Monday if the life of Mr. Hills is to be spared," Radio Uganda quoted Amin as saying. "If he comes before then we will discuss the political side of the matter."

The Ugandan leader said that Hills, a 61-year-old retired British lecturer convicted of treason, would be shot Monday morning.

He said the execution would be carried out on the spot where British forces killed 27 Moslem soldiers of the former Uganda Rifles. He was understood to be referring to the execution in 1898 of Sudanese soldiers who mutinied during the early days of British rule in Uganda.

Amin's announcement came a few hours after two British officers, Lt. Gen. Sir Chandos Blair, former commanding officer of the Fourth Battalion of the King's African Rifles, and Maj. Ian Graham, formerly Amin's commander in the King's African Rifles, flew into Kampala from London with the queen's letter.

Amin boarded a helicopter and flew to northern Uganda to attend a ceremony marking Africa Refugee Day before the envoys could hand over the letter, the radio said. However, an earlier broadcast said Blair had met with Amin, discussing military matters.

In Brussels, the Parliament of the Common Market also urged Amin to spare Hill's life.

In addition to demanding that Callaghan fly to Kampala, Amin has stipulated that Britain expel Ugandan exiles, supply Uganda with military spare parts, and halt "malicious propaganda" against the African country, a former British colony.

A Ugandan court found Hills guilty of treason for his remarks about Amin in a book manuscript.

However, another Briton, 38-year-old businessman Stanley Smolen, was cleared Thursday on charges of hoarding cooking oil. If convicted he too would have faced the firing squad, and Amin said the acquittal showed that justice prevails in Uganda.

Amin met Smolen, a building contractor, and members of the tribunal shortly after the verdict was announced and posed for photographs, Radio Uganda said.

The broadcast said Amin told Smolen that he, his family and property would be protected, the radio said. It added that Smolen told Amin he had been well looked after while in military custody and said his case had been handled fairly.

Midwest pilgrimage

By MARK CLUTTER
Religion Editor

"Good-bye, God," said the Religion Editor. "I won't be hearing from you and your friends for a couple of weeks. I'm going to live it up in Wichita and Kansas City."

How wrong he was! The Religion Editor is more of a religious editor than he was two weeks ago. Experiences religious and secular enriched his view of life. He will discuss some of the experiences in the first person.

MOST PROFOUND was my visit with my mother, Dr. May H. Clutter, who was ordained as a minister years before my birth. She is still an active minister every day of her life.

My mother at 89 is frail and slim. She is recovering rather well from a broken hip in a Kansas City convalescent home. She is half blind with a cataract which limits her life-long pleasure with the Bible and other great books. There was a time when at the end of a busy day she would sit up half the night to read.

Three times each day she strives to recover her ability to walk with the aid of a walker.

It doesn't sound like a joyful way of life, does it? But she is joyful.

Most of the people in convalescent homes are not very happy. They are old and sad and often in pain. But when she talks to them a little brightness creeps into their faces.

Life has never been easy for her. She was a farm girl in pioneer Nebraska. There were times of poverty — the expression, "poor as a church mouse" is understandable to most clergy. But she and my father, Dr. Edward Clutter, preached and wrote and taught and counseled without ceasing.

She was always willing to dare, to adventure. Five years ago, against doctor's orders, she went around the world with a bunch of her Christian pals.

She is not lonely. In addition to the friends in the home she has had more than 100 visitors in the last few weeks.

To her Christianity provides the answers to life's problems. "I can sometimes tell a real Christian at a glance," she said. "A true Christian has strength and serenity and joy that other people seldom find."

I WAS quite impressed with Swope Ridge Convalescent Home. I have visited such places in the past. Most of them are little better than hell holes, just places to stash inconvenient old people.

This one is different, perhaps because it is both scientific and Christian. Pretty nuns in attractive "civilian" clothes scurry about their duties. You can tell the nuns by their abbreviated headresses and their crosses.

The personnel generally is youngish and well trained. They are also tolerant and gracious. They are friends of their patients.

THE ONLY other directly religious experience we had was on our twentieth wedding anniversary in Wichita. So in the afternoon we went to St. James Church.

It was, of course, locked — a dreadful commentary on the decadence of our era. We went around to the back and I tried several doors. A woman drove up and said, "Oh, I remember you. Try that door. You are just in time for Communion in the chapel."

There were a dozen or so worshippers. The service was "High Church." We came to the "Kiss of Peace," that ancient, recently revived custom in which the people greet each other, more often with a handshake than a kiss in America. In this service the people also embraced the bearded priest. As I did so I said, "We were married at this altar rail 20 years ago today."

The priest celebrated the Eucharist with special honor and a blessing for Dale and me.

FAITH can be secular too. When I left Wichita 13 years ago it was a shabby town, especially downtown. It looked like the worst parts of downtown Long Beach. But there were people of vision and faith in Wichita. They went to work. Urban Renewal and much private money worked miracles. Many new buildings — architectural masterpieces — sprang up. A huge area of slum and semi-slum adjacent to downtown was leveled. It is now a place of swank townhouses and parkland.

I will write in more detail about the miracle of Wichita later.

A PLEASANT thing about a pilgrimage "back home" is looking up old friends and finding out how time has treated them. In my case time has treated them well. I found their enriched personalities encouraging. I will mention a few.

Darrell Bartee is a retired editor. When he left his desk several years ago he joined the Peace Corps. He insisted on an agricultural assignment in Colombia. He worked hard to refresh his knowledge of farming and to learn the Spanish language. For two years he worked in the tropics, teaching poor farmers how to improve their crops. Although well into his sixties, he found the adventure worth-while.

I got re-acquainted with my daughters. Joanna Kruckenberg, "my daughter the cop," teaches policemen and others in the Department of Administration of Justice at Wichita State University. Marka Bianchi, a poetic type, is determined to return to her home in the Rockies as soon as she can figure out how. I observed grandchildren. I would like to be a real grandpa and spoil kids living in the next block. Daughters, especially when they grow up to be women, are nice to know.

I visited Jim Fisher, adjunct of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post. He still hears the echoes of the bugles and guns of 1918. He still has a trim military bearing. For most of the years since that war he has been seeing to it that ancient combatants have a comfortable clubhouse for food, booze (sometimes illegal) and the exchange of memories of the fun and horror of war. The embittered Vietnam veterans are now beginning to join, he said. He is a merry old guy, quite satisfied with his sometimes stressful career.

I had a long chat with Don Granger, who was my protegee at the end of World War II. He came to the Wichita Eagle as a battle-happy, recently discharged sailor in underwater demolition, which must be the most dangerous swimming sport. I was told to teach him how to be a reporter. I didn't know much about it myself, but I tried. I must have been successful because he is now an editor and outstanding columnist. He is also a bearded man with a mellow view of life.

Perhaps the most meaningful of all my contacts was with a girl friend of long, long ago. Ours was a bittersweet love marred by many quarrels and misunderstandings. Finally we had to break off. We enjoyed a long, long lunch. Today she is a slim, trim, straight, beautiful blonde. She has all the traits I loved in her, but I saw none of the old bitterness and anger. We have both done a bit of living and learning since then.

There are so many people I could mention. For one, Betty Dickerson, artist and teacher, who with her late husband, Bill, did so much to make Wichita a city conscious of the civilized need for art. We had some fine conversation.

And Dean and Edie Leffler with whom we have been partying and vacationing for 20 years.

A pilgrimage can be worth-while.

DANCING girls in church? You don't see them often, but I did at St. Luke's Episcopal last Sunday. They were two pretty girls in leotards who did a stately ballet during the Old Testament reading. They were accompanied by a flute.

Later there was guitar and violin music. Carnations were distributed to the audience. The "sermon" was a kind of history of hymns ranging from St. Thomas Aquinas to modern folk music.

The occasion was a youth service, with the young people doing everything except Communion. The effect was joyful, spontaneous and reverent. At the end the staid Episcopalians shouted "Hallelujah" like any Pentecostals.

Even Episcopals don't need to be staid every Sunday.

Hostages' letters tell optimism

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — The U.S. and Dutch embassies received more letters Friday from two U.S. students and a young Dutch woman kidnapped by Zaire guerrillas and said the three were in good health and that the letters gave "renewed confidence" for their safe return.

The U.S. Embassy said the letters, dated June 15, 16 and 17, were being given "immediate and urgent consideration" by the American and Dutch governments, but refused to elaborate.

It was the third group of letters received from Carrie Jane Hunter of Atherton, Calif., Kenneth Stephen Smith of Garden Grove, Calif. — both Stanford University students — and Emilie Bergmann of Holland since their capture May 20 from a remote wildlife research station in western Tanzania.

Another American student, Barbara Smuts, 24, of Ann Arbor, Mich., was released six days later with a ransom note demanding $500,000, arms, ammunition and the release of political prisoners. It said if the demands were not met within 60 days — meaning July 20 — the hostages would be killed.

Tanzania so far has refused to meet the demands.

Yank who nailed gang in England hiding out

LONDON (AP) — American businessman Mark Yarry, who posed as a gangster to help Scotland Yard catch a ring of counterfeiters, went underground Friday to avoid possible reprisals from Britain's underworld.

Police sources said the 40-year-old Yarry, a married man with two children whose hobby is stamp collecting, was in a hideout in England.

EVEN his home address in America was kept secret because of security reasons.

"All we can say is that Yarry is from New York," one police source said.

At London's Old Bailey criminal court on Thursday a judge told Yarry and a British detective: "I wish it was in my power to award you Oscars."

The judge had just sentenced the four members of the counterfeiting gang, including Cyril Fentiman who once boasted he could break the Bank of England with his fake notes. Fentiman got five years.

"It was hell," Yarry said of his nine-week masquerade. "I had a lot of help from Scotland Yard but it was very difficult. I do not think I would do it again."

Yarry said his adventure in Britain's underworld cost him his job with a U.S. eyeglass company here.

"THEY said I was spending too much time working with the police and a fortune winning and dining these crooks at the best hotels and clubs," said Yarry. He did not say whose money was being spent and was unavailable for further comment.

Yarry's work with Scotland Yard began last September after British police persuaded him to act as an underworld buyer of counterfeit notes. A detective known as Jim Goldie was assigned to work with him.

The American said a casual conversation with a taxi driver prompted his involvement with the police.

The net dropped on the gang after Yarry set up a deal to buy the equivalent of $138,000 in forged notes. The Yard gave him a briefcase containing the equivalent of $34,500 in real money to hand over to the gang. When he did, the detectives pounced.

A discipline for this world — and next

Seventh-day Adventists

By MARK CLUTTER
Do you want to live a long, healthy life? You might consider joining the Seventh-day Adventists.

"It has been proved that the Seventh-day Adventists have a much longer life expectancy than other Americans," said Dr. Larry Kagels, pastor of the First Seventh-day Adventist Church, 1001 E. Third St.

If you go that route you must be prepared to make some sacrifices. You must give up certain meats and seafoods. You will be urged to become a vegetarian. You will do no work, no matter how profitable, between sundown on Friday and sundown on Saturday. You will be told to give up movies, frivolous clothes and jewelry. You will be asked to give 10 per cent of your income before taxes. (This shouldn't be too hard, considering the money you will save on booze, cigarettes, duds, gems, ham and movies.)

The Adventists will help you with such problems, whether you are a member or not.

"WE HAVE cooking schools open to the public to teach people how to prepare vegetarian dinners in the right way," Dr. Kagels said. "We think this is important for most people in these days of high meat prices."

The church does not forbid eating meat approved by the Mosaic laws, such as beef and most kinds of fish. But vegetarianism is strongly recommended. Dr. Kagels estimates that about 30 per cent eat some meat.

"No one should become a vegetarian by just quitting meat," he said. "I did that when I was a young convert and in a little while I was sick. A vegetarian must know how to balance his vegetables to get the proper proteins and other nutrients.

"Actually some other diet habits, such as an excessive amount of sugar can be much more harmful than meat. To be a healthy vegetarian requires some knowledge."

Almost no Adventists smoke, but the church is trying to help others with its Five-Day Plan to Stop Smoking. It works. Across the nation 70 to 75 per cent quit or greatly reduce smoking. The programs here are usually crowded. They are free.

"When one considers how hard it is for most people to quit, we are proud of our record."

The Adventists are "pacifists" who put on their nation's uniforms with patriotic pride. They have two problems in the service. They do not believe in taking human life so they seek noncombatant status, which means medical duty. And they do not believe in working on the Sabbath, so often they are assigned to duty on Sunday. Of course, they do work on the Sabbath in battle or other emergencies. Many of them perform acts of heroism under fire. One of them, Desmond T. Doss, received the Congressional Medal of Honor for saving the lives of 70 men in a bad fire fight on Okinawa in World War II.

The military has become very friendly to these soldiers who won't fight. Young men at their own expense attend camps under Army direction.

ADVENTISTS are keen on education, with special emphasis on medicine and health and social services. The denomination, which has a membership of about 500,000, has 1,007 educational institutions ranging from elementary school to university. Loma Linda University, not many miles from here, trains doctors, nurses, medical scientists, dentists and similar professions. It is almost entirely a graduate school.

There are 20 doctors in First Church here, which has a membership of 700. There are many nurses, teachers and other professionals. The number of college graduates in the denomination is unusually high.

The Adventists are strong for foreign missions. "Our growth in the United States has been rather moderate, but our membership is soaring in other countries. This is because of our medical missionaries. When they go to almost any land and convince the rulers they are there to help people, they are made welcome."

WHAT DO Adventists believe?

As their name implies, they believe that the Advent — the Second Coming of Christ — is near. But no one sets the date.

They believe that the Bible is the inspired Word of God. It is the true guide for faith and practice.

They believe that Saturday is the Sabbath, as commanded in the Law of Moses. They believe that Old Testament dietary laws and moral statements are binding on Christians today.

A woman was one of the founders of the Seventh-day Adventists. She was Mrs. Ellen Gould White. She and her husband, James, whom she married in 1846, worked hard in the development of the church. She considered herself a messenger, not a prophet. After her husband's death in 1881, she continued the work. She wrote 53 books plus countless letters and articles; traveled extensively, set up a publishing house, schools and hospitals and missions in Australia. She died in 1915.

Although a major founder was a woman, the church has no ordained women ministers. There is, Dr. Kagels said, a growing demand that this be changed.

Dr. Kagels, who is 54, recently received his doctor of philosophy degree from Bowling Green State University.

LETTERS

End of war

Religion Editor:

The problem of war, as well as other problems man faces, are due to his spiritual condition.

God, the Father of Jesus, created human life and revealed in his Holy Word how he wants us to live.

How could we possibly have war if every person in the world would take seriously that one part of the Ten Commandments, "Thou shalt not covet." To covet is to want what belongs to somebody else.

We are told in Matthew 22 to love God with all our soul and mind. This is the first requirement that God asks. The second is like it — you are to love your neighbor as yourself.

Our society tries to treat the problem of war with political, economic and military solutions. We will always have war on this earth because man is not obedient to the commandments of God.

Only the Second Coming of Jesus Christ will bring the peace man is always searching for.

Navy Chapel

Religion Editor:

Thanks so much for the fine article that Ralph Hinman Jr. wrote concerning the Chapel. I have had many calls and notes from people who I didn't know read the "good news" page.

I had a call from a couple wanting to be married. When asked how they got my name, I learned that they had seen the article in the paper. It pays to advertise!

So thanks again for your kindness and interest.

Orthodox

Religion Editor:

Just a note to thank you for printing the news article on Fr. Charles P. Donahue's lecture on the Orthodox Roman Catholic movement (I, P-T, May 17).

Various people at the lecture indicated they had learned of the lecture through the article. We sincerely appreciate your cooperation.

USC law dean speaks for Baha'i

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Davis McClain

NEW YORK (AP) "The earth is but one country, and mankind its citizens."

That planetary interdependence has become a common theme nowadays, and it's a central credo of a religion begun in Iran 130 years ago and which now reaches into many countries, the Baha'i faith.

Its ideal of international government "is becoming more and more accepted," says Dr. Dorothy W. Nelson, dean of the University of Southern California law school and an officer of the National Spiritual Assembly of Baha'is in the U.S.

"World conditions are forcing us to recognize it."

As the first American woman to head a major law school, and for seven years the only one until last year, Dr. Nelson says the discipline of law and justice themselves point to the present need of an interlinked world system. "Inevitably we are moving toward it," she said in an interview. "It won't be brought about only by Baha'is. The plan is of God. But humanity carries it along. It's going to happen."

With the swelling interconnections of the globe's communications, transportation, scientific advances, commerce and economy, and with its common fate subjected to its military potentialities, she said:

"People are realizing increasingly that only through sharing will we be able to feed the world and solve the problems of the international economy. Once we recognize we are one world, we can forget tariffs, forget boycotts. "There would be enough food to feed the world if we just let those countries produce what they can produce best instead of competing to become independent and self-sufficient. Some kind of working international structure is the way to bring about world peace and the happiness of mankind."

This vision of a cooperative world commonwealth was held up in the middle of the last century by the Baha'i founder, Baha'u'llah, an Iranian teacher whose voluminous writings are regarded by followers as revelations from God.

"Oneness of humanity, oneness of religion, oneness of God," goes a key saying.

The unitary goals stress equal rights and worth of male and female, equality of races, an end to nationalistic prejudices, the basic harmony of religion and science, universal education and equal justice for all.

"The best beloved of all things in my sight is justice," Baha'u'llah wrote.

He is considered the "manifestation of God" for this age, the latest of such manifestations in a long line of "progressive revelation," including Abraham, Moses, Krishna, Buddha, Zoroaster, Jesus and Mohammed.

"The same truths are reflected in all religions, but with advancing insights," said Dr. Nelson, a former Episcopalian, who with her husband, Los Angeles Municipal Judge James F. Nelson, a former Presbyterian, became Baha'is in 1954, the year after they finished law school.

Although the group issues no statistics, estimates are that Baha'is now total 4 million in 320 countries of Europe, Asia, Africa and America, including 70,000 in 1,000 local spiritual assemblies in this country.

I suppose all of us have some weak spot in our makeup. But any weakness can be changed into a strength. You do not need to be pushed around indefinitely by some characteristic that is a bother to you.

How do you go about changing a weak spot into a strong one? First, want to. This is hard because maybe you don't want to, but know it is important that you should. And the next step is even harder: choose to be rid of a weakness, and believe that you can. You've got to want to change strongly enough to make it stick. Start saying to your indecisive self: "I'm through being controlled by this weak element. I won't live with it any more! I'm fed up and I'm going to turn this old weakness into a new strength!"

I know this process will work, for I tried it myself on an enormous inferiority complex. An inferiority complex is no fun. Shy, shrinking, reticent, I would think glumly: "I don't amount to anything; have no brains, no ability." Presently I became aware that others were agreeing — for people unconsciously tend to take you at your own self-appraisal.

At college one professor seemed to take satanic pleasure in firing questions at a student standing before the class. When he did this to me, even though I knew the answer, my mouth got dry, I became tongue tied and put on a pretty miserable demonstration.

One day the professor called me to his office. "What's the matter with you, anyway?" he asked sternly. "I am aware that you know the material, but why can't you deliver?" He repeated a couple of questions previously put and I answered them readily enough. "Why didn't you come up with these answers in class!" he exclaimed.

"I don't know Professor. Guess I was all tied up," I replied weakly.

"The real trouble with you," he continued, "is that you are a scared rabbit. Why don't you get wise to yourself and shake loose from that inferiority complex? Act like a man, not a poor weak fish!" On which high note the interview concluded.

Angered I stomped down the hall muttering: "I'm going to resign from this university; then go back and clean up that professor!" But I knew he was right about me.

So I went out and stood miserably on the front steps of the university building. I asked myself a serious question: "Are you going to live this insipid, scared way the rest of your life?" Right then and there I made a choice. I decided I was completely fed up with being a scared rabbit. I chose to do something about it, and well remember saying aloud: "I'm through with this inferiority complex and I don't mean maybe."

Well, you don't actually get through with something all that fast. But I did discover that once you make a choice the directional finger is pointed in the way of successful overcoming. It was a long, hard road but finally that type of fear and negativity went down the drain.

I don't cite this personal experience to give the impression that I'm any great example of the power of choice. Far from it. But that happened to be my problem, and, incidentally, the inferiority complex is the problem of a lot of people. Sovereign choice is a power given you by the Creator. And it is a fact that the minute you choose to change you are on the way to changing.

A pathetic thing about many of us is indecisiveness about changing a weakness into a strength even when we are sick of being that way.

I knew a man who would fly off at the slightest provocation and, to use his words, "tell anyone where to go." But this got him into a lot of trouble. So he "just up and decided to stop flying off." So so basic was his choice that he has never let go of himself, even one time, since he made that decision.

It's an encouraging fact that you can actually do just about anything with yourself that you choose.

A group discusses how to get more effective coverage in news and advertising media. This Sunday is Communications Sunday. It was pointed out that 61.9 per cent of the Americans hold formal church memberships but the messages of religion to the public are often slighted. Mrs. Mary Dorr, executive director of Religion in Media Association, is surrounded by clergymen. (Mrs.

Dorr is the former Miss Mary Wright of Long Beach.) From left: Rev. Karl Christ, First Presbyterian Church, San Pedro; Pastor Thomas Cooper, St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Palos Verdes; Rev. ## White House disdainful of 'piece of paper' energy bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With unconcealed disdain, The White House Friday described the House energy bill as "a piece of paper" and urged the Senate to scrap it and start again.

Under questioning, Press Secretary Ron Nessen said the bill passed Thursday by the House had "abandoned" President Ford's goal of energy independence by 1985.

With a shrug and a sigh, Nessen said: "It's very difficult to comment on that bill — what's left of it."

"The Congress not only did not establish a method to get to the President's goal, but Congress abandoned the goal."

"The President considers this basically as a piece of paper," he said. "It simply does not get there — that's all."

Nessen said the Senate has an obligation to start congressional work on an energy program all over again. He said Ford would work with the Senate toward that end.

The House bill — which now needs Senate action — sets oil import quotas, taxes business uses of fuels, gives tax breaks for fuel conservation, penalizes the makers of gas-guzzling cars and creates a trust fund for energy research.

BUT IT does not include the strict gasoline tax or other tough conservation measures Ford called for six months ago.

In response to questions, Nessen said Ford still might impose a third $1-a-barrel hike on oil import tariffs and will decide that question when he sees what sort of energy bill Congress finally enacts.

He also said Ford still plans to ask Congress to decontrol the price of oil produced inside the United States or, as an alternative, may allow the current controls to expire without renewal this August.

Coleman predicts cut in road funds by President

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman Jr. said Friday President Ford will soon propose that the size of the highway trust fund be drastically reduced and that it be limited to interstate highway construction.

Of the four cents per gallon federal gasoline tax now going into the $7 billion per year fund, two cents would go into the general Treasury instead of the trust fund.

Another one cent would be given, in effect, to the states. One cent of the federal tax would be removed in any state that raised its own gas tax one cent. The driving public would pay no more, but the state would get the benefit of the tax.

This would leave one cent per gallon going into the trust fund, plus some lesser taxes such as the tax on new trucks.

The trust fund then would be made permanent and limited to the interstate system, Coleman said in an address to the National Press Club. The trust fund currently is used for some noninterstate highway projects.

The legislation probably will get a frosty reception in Congress.

RANSOM PAID

Brazil soon after the brothers were kidnapped last Sept. 19.

Earlier this week, as part of the ransom, Bunge and Borne had tried to distribute food and clothing worth $1 million to poor people in about 60 locations throughout the country.

Police intercepted a large part of these consignments by halting trucks hired by the company before they reached slum areas.

The distribution of the goods was revealed in paid advertisements that appeared on Wednesday in several European and Argentine newspapers. The ads were placed by Bunge and Borne as requested by the guerrillas.

The published statements explained that the food and clothing were being distributed "as a gesture to Masters Jorge and Juan Borne."

According to the advertisement, the Montoneros also asked the company to pay "a very important sum" as a "guarantee" for the two brothers and as a "fine for the crime of irregular money exchange."

The advertisement did not specify how much money was to be paid, nor did it explain what alleged irregularities the firm was supposed to have committed in money exchange.

The guerrillas also demanded that Bunge and Borne reach "an immediate solution to labor problems" in its industrial installations, and ordered the firm to place busts of the late General Juan Domingo Peron and his late wife, Eva Duarte, in all its factories.

According to the Montoneros, they had tried the Borne brothers, found them guilty of "exploiting the workers of Bunge and Borne, and sentenced them to one year in a "people's prison." But the guerrillas said the sentence had been commuted to nine months since the company met their ransom demands.

The Borne brothers were kidnapped soon after they left their home en route to their offices. The Montoneros had laid an elaborate ambush that involved setting up a road detour with the use of fake street signs, stolen public works vehicles and dozens of guerrillas dressed in municipal employee uniforms.

A Bunge and Borne company manager, Alberto Bosch, and a chauffeur, Juan Carlos Perez, were shot to death by the guerrillas during the kidnapping.

Ten days after seizing the two brothers, the Montoneros kidnapped another Bunge and Borne executive, Alfredo Margarite, who reportedly knew the financial resources of the company intimately and was in a position to inform the guerrillas how much the firm could pay for the Borne. Margarite was released within a short time after payment of an undisclosed ransom, which unconfirmed news reports placed at several millions of dollars.

The Montoneros profess a revolutionary socialist philosophy, but only a few years ago their beliefs were closer to fascism. Because of their political volatility, they have always been kept at arm's length by the People's Revolutionary Army, the other major guerrilla group, which has always been Marxist-Leninist.

The Montoneros are the same guerrillas who kidnapped and later killed John Patrick Egan, the U.S. consul in the city of Cordoba. Egan was shot to death by the guerrillas last Feb. 27, after the Argentine government refused to produce four captured Montoneros on national television. Police sources later disclosed that three of those guerrillas already were dead.

ings in the program," Zarb said, "I feel that the track record of the past six months shows significant progress both in developing a better set of rules and in being more effective in enforcing those rules."

Mitchell, now with the Internal Revenue Service, was an FEA auditor in the region headquartered in Dallas. He audited smaller producers and natural gas plants in the five-state area headed by the Dallas office. The audits were done to check compliance with pricing laws.

"How did you decide whom to audit?" Kennedy asked him.

"In several instances I went through the Yellow Pages," he said. "I would look up 'producer' and go down the list."

The audience laughed and Kennedy smiled.

"I understood I was not supposed to talk with Washington under any circumstances," Mitchell said.

Kidnapers free Rome industrialist

ROME (AP) — The president of Rome's biggest industrial plant was released by his kidnapers Friday night after being held for 11 days, police said.

They said Amedeo Ortolani, 36, had not been harmed. The family paid a ransom for his release but no figure was disclosed, police said. Ortolani's father, a prominent lawyer, had been dealing with the kidnapers on terms for the release.

Ortolani is president of Voxson, a manufacturer of television sets, automobile radios and other appliances.

He was abducted June 10 in a northern suburb of Rome as he was being driven to his office. Authorities said two men disguised as policemen waved his car to a halt, then pushed out the driver and drove away with the industrialist.

His car, with several bullet holes, was found a few days later. Police said the kidnapers apparently had fired to intimidate Ortolani.

He was one of 25 kidnap victims in Italy so far this year. All but five have been released.

Court blocks bus fare hike

Market reflecting economic rebound

By RICHARD HUGHES
UPI Business Writer

The rate of inflation was cut in half, spendable income has increased and orders for manufactured products rose for the second consecutive month, government economic statistics showed Friday.

Investors were encouraged. The Dow Jones industrial index of the New York Stock Exchange, which rose 17.52 points Thursday, made strong gains again Friday.

The Dow closed 10.09 points higher at 845.35. Analysts said the strong market, which had been in the doldrums for several weeks, was the result of brighter prospects for economic recovery.

THE White House called the increase of 0.4 per cent in the consumer price index for May "a continuation of the significant reduction of inflationary pressures."

The increase, which translates into an annual inflationary rate of about 5 per cent, is less than half the double-digit increases of a year ago.

It came as the result of lower prices on some food stuffs, new cars and clothing, and relatively small increases for household products and supplies and alcoholic drinks.

Prices for these consumer items offset higher prices for meat, used cars and gasoline, which rose a penny a gallon because of President Ford's $2 import duty on foreign oil.

The Labor Department also said tax cuts designed to stimulate the economy, pushed spendable income 4.4 per cent higher for the average worker. This means spendable income rose to almost equal what it was a year ago after several months of erosion.

The average worker with three dependents had spendable income of $145.44 in May after deductions for federal taxes and Social Security and adjustments for higher prices.

The Commerce Department said orders of durable goods — everything from jet fighters to washing machines — rose last month by 1.4 per cent, following a substantial increase of 9.2 per cent in April.

It was the first two-month official — you're paying more for rent, gasoline and medical needs than ever before in Orange and Los Angeles counties. Government statistics say so.

The report released Friday by the Federal Bureau of Labor Statistics showed May's consumer index for the two counties stood at a record 156.9.

And inflation was up 0.8 per cent for the month, bringing inflation to 4.6 per cent for the first five months of the year and 11.8 per cent in the past 12 months.

The consumer index means goods and services which cost $10 just eight years ago now cost $15.69.

month increase in orders since June and July of last year. The increase pushed the level of orders to $39.30 billion, the highest level since last November's $43.18 billion.

In other developments: —A nationwide rail strike threatened for Monday was averted when management and railroad clerks agreed to continue negotiations for another 30 days, delaying the strike deadline until July 21.

In Detroit, an auto executive said a strike would have closed the industry "quickly."

—Wilson & Co. closed its Omaha meat plant for three weeks because of adverse economic conditions.

The company asked 900 employees to take their vacations or leaves of absence.

—A U.S. Steel Corp. spokesman said the industry doesn't expect improvement in sales until later this year. "Certainly, whatever happens to the American economy is reflected in steel on a delayed basis," he said.

black eye, but that's all right."

None of Ford's vetoes has been overridden in the present, heavily Democratic Congress, a record which contributed to grumbling among some Democrats, especially first-termers, against the present leadership.

The House passed the disputed bill, which includes incentive payments to home buyers, interest-reducing subsidies and protection against foreclosure, by a 253 to 155 vote. This was 19 less than the two-thirds that would be required to override a veto.

Albert said the Democratic whip organization is polling members. Sources said some Democrats who opposed the bill have agreed to vote against the veto, but they made no claims of having turned around enough votes to prevail.

"I will get to as many members personally as I can," Albert said.

'Not enough sharing in Revenue Sharing'

Advocates for elderly seek more aid

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

Substantial funds from federal revenue sharing and the new Title XX of the Social Security Act should be given to programs for senior citizens, a Long Beach public hearing by the California Office on Aging was told Friday.

"We need a state plan and state leadership to win revenue sharing for the needs of older people, or strip away the mask and declare it is a fake," asserted Herb Nalibow, Long Beach city director of senior citizen affairs.

Nalibow suggested revenue sharing is "misleading" because "we are not getting our share."

He also called for efforts to make Title XX "a boon and not a boondoggle, as seems to be the case in our state."

Margaret Ganssle, director of the Retired Senior Volunteers Program in the Long Beach-Lakewood area, also advocated use of Title XX money for senior citizen programs.

"The ways and means of utilizing these funds—$245,500,000 in 1976 for California—are endless," Mrs. Ganssle said.

"Title XX, because of the generality of its objectives, can truly enhance the quality of life for many of the aged in California and it is up to the State Office on Aging to see that it is implemented in a timely and reasonable fashion," she said.

Stan J. Nielsen, acting director of the State Office on Aging, who conducted the public hearing, said that, in California, Title XX funds are already being used.

"Our problem is to convince the decision-makers that some of the services that are being provided to other people should be extended to the elderly," Nielsen said.

The hearing was one of 19 being conducted throughout the state during May through July to get citizen input on recommended objectives for the state plan on Programs for the Aged during the 1976-77 fiscal year.

Other members of the panel hearing the testimony were Cora Cocks of Long Beach, vice chairman of the State Commission on Aging; Ignacio Valaba, deputy for programs at the State Office on Aging in Sacramento; and Fran Kobata, consultant at the Southern Regional Office, 107 S. Broadway, Los Angeles.

Transportation, health-care and problems of trying to live on a fixed income in times of rising costs were emphasized by other speakers.

Helen Wakefield, executive director of Long Beach's Senior Citizen Opportunities and Services, said:

"Transportation is very much like the weather—everybody talks about it, but as long as I've been in Senior Opportunities and Services, which is a year and a half, I haven't seen anything done about it."

The kind of transportation senior citizens need is that which criss-crosses the city, taking people to places like the doctor's office, Mrs. Wakefield said.

She also said the State Office on Aging should take steps to protect the elderly from situations such as where an 8 per cent increase is given in supplemental benefits, and a landlord raises the rent 10 per cent.

Ruth Waincott of Santa Ana said a major problem faced by elderly persons is the cost of medicines, adding that three-fourths of all senior citizens are required to take some type of medication.

When an individual has a total income of $100 or $200 a month, Mrs. Waincott said, a price of $10 for a single prescription takes a large part of his available money.

Esther Jackson of Senior Opportunities and Services also emphasized the problems that senior citizens face in getting adequate health care. She urged the committee to "become an advocate" for adoption of a comprehensive health plan for all American citizens.

Although many people do not realize it, the elderly frequently need legal advice, and legal services are only "minimally" funded by the federal government, said Toby Rothschild, executive director of the Legal Aid Foundation of Long Beach.

The one-day Long Beach hearing was the last in Southern California until July 10-11, when the Office on Aging closes the 1975 hearings in Pasadena and Riverside.

Hearings set on oil revenue

By RALPH HINMAN
Staff Writer

Public hearings concerning oil pricing practices reportedly costing Long Beach and other California producers millions of dollars in lost revenues will be held this summer, the local Chamber of Commerce was advised Friday.

Charles Bails, a Federal Energy Administration official, in a long-distance phone call, told Chamber Vice President C. C. (Bud) Albright that hearings concerning price imbalances between California oil and petroleum produced in other states will be held in the next few weeks.

Albright later commented that if California oil is brought to parity, millions of dollars in now-lost revenue will go to local and state government. And Long Beach royalty owners annually may divide about $1 million in additional revenue.

Because of the imbalance, California 18-gravity crude now is priced 80 to 90 cents below the same gravity oil drilled in other states, Albright said. He added that present estimates indicate that as a result, the state annually loses $36 million from its tideland fields alone. The City of Long Beach could realize another $500,000 per year if pricing procedures were equalized.

Long Beach Chamber directors on April 2 voted to support efforts by the city, state and California Independent Producers Association to win redress from this situation by petitioning the Federal Energy Commission.

Albright, chamber vice president for economic development, said he and Bails also discussed additional oil projects in Long Beach and how the life of the local field can be extended. Several producing areas within the Wilmington field here are expected to become uneconomic to pump by the end of this year due to current, federally regulated oil prices.

Sun struggles to announce: it's summer

As prelude to the first day of summer today, Friday's top temperature crept to 73—not enough to excite the real sun lovers but enough to draw released schoolkids to the sunny streets with skateboards and daring, warm-blooded beach fans to the sands.

As if in anticipation of the warm days to come, the sun came out in midmorning and stayed late in Long Beach; it was expected to do the same today.

Forecasters were predicting a high in the low 70s for today and sunshine after early morning low clouds. Sunday is scheduled for a high of 76.

Elsewhere in the Southland, the prediction was for sunny and warmer days in mountains and deserts with highs in the low 70s in the mountains and in the high 90s in the lower deserts.

The extended forecast for next week called for night and morning low clouds and fog along the coastal areas with highs ranging from near 70 on the coast to the low 90s in inland valleys.

L.B. students fly today to D.C. seminar

Carrying the blessings of the Long Beach American Bicentennial Committee, 150 local high school and college students will leave Los Angeles International Airport at 11 p.m. today for a weeklong congressional seminar in Washington, D.C.

Participating legislators will include Sens. Barry Goldwater, George McGovern, Hubert Humphrey and James Buckley and Reps. Mark Hannaford of Long Beach-Lakewood and Mike McCormack and Clarence Brown of the Black Caucus.

THE SEMINAR is presented by Washington Workshops, a nonprofit foundation, to give young people an opportunity to observe the federal government in operation and to participate in dialog with its leaders. Director of Washington Workshops is Noel Gould of Long Beach.

The Bicentennial Committee designated the Long Beach participation in the workshops, which are held weekly every summer for students throughout the nation, as a bicentennial event because of the tie with both modern and historic America.

Porty of the participating students will earn from one to six units of college credit under the Washington Workshops Fellowship program, recently established by Long Beach State University, Gould said.

GOULD, who became active with Washington Workshops after participating in a seminar during his senior year at Millikan High School, said a video-tape documentary of the Long Beach participation will be made. The documentary, plus student speakers and color slides, will be made available to civic organizations for programs after the seminar, he said.

Headquarters of Washington Workshops is in Washington, D.C., but organizations interested in obtaining the documentary, or getting speakers for programs may write locally to Washington Workshops, 5351 E. Eagle St., Long Beach, Gould said.

Hannaford blasts CIA

"As we make the world safe for diversity, we make our own country safe for the diversity that is the essence of our political heritage," Rep. Mark Hannaford told Long Beach City College students at commencement exercises Friday morning.

The Lakewood Democrat, a former political science teacher at the college, also blasted the CIA and the "intelligence establishment" which he said is "continuing to lock us into a foreign policy position that makes a mockery of détente."

Speaking to 1,912 graduating students and an estimated 3,000 guests, he criticized the same intelligence establishment for offering advice on foreign policy based on information that is kept secret.

"We have been spending $4.2 billion a year for this intelligence," he said, "and what do we get? The advice that led us to support some of the most corrupt and repressive governments in the world."

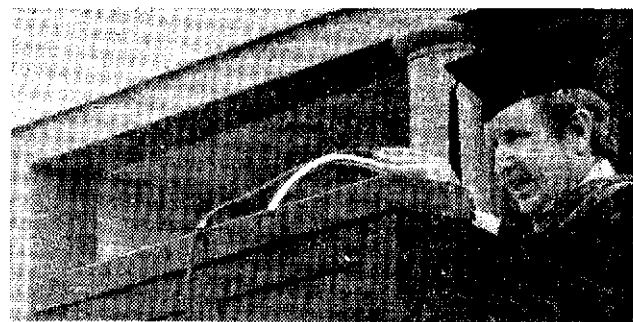

"It is a contradiction," he continued, "that a free people is guided in such fundamental decisions as war and peace based on secret information...We are not a truly free people when that happens, and it must change" he said.

Hannaford blamed the state of things today on the decisions made after World War II—the polarization between Communist and non-Communist countries and ideas—and this country's decision that its mission was to engage in a holy war to stamp out communism abroad and at home.

"This past dozen years that have shaped your lives have left scars upon us all, upon our souls, upon us as a nation. They have caused a far greater share of the nation's agony and a high degree of alienation and distrust in those of you whose lives have been fundamentally shaped in this time—distrust of our basic institutions and particularly of our government," he said.

He concluded: "If any good can come of international political events of recent years, it would be for détente to become a reality... The pursuit of a foreign policy based upon a diverse world rather than a polarized world has great promise...I intend to do all I can to test the thesis and nudge public policy in that direction."

REP. HANNAFORD ON COLLEGE ROSTRUM

Among the nearly 2,000 degrees conferred at the ceremony by Mrs. Elizabeth Wallace, board of education president, was one for Mrs. Margaret Oberer, whose 15 grandchildren attended the ceremony.

Family and friends of graduates enlivened the rites with an abundance of clicking, whirring cameras and hugs for the robed participants.

Dr. Frank C. Pearce, college president, welcomed the audience, the Rev. Eugene Bell of the Atlantic United Methodist Church pronounced the invocation, and Ron Logan directed the college symphonic band music.

Limited gains for women's rights cited

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Cathy O'Neill, a Los Angeles field representative for U.S. Sen. John V. Tunney, D-Calif., Friday cited promising gains in women's rights while acknowledging that major progress may have reached only "a raised awareness level" of the problem.

Speaking at the Third Friday Forum at the Edgewater Hyatt House, Ms. O'Neill first expressed regrets that in the midst of this International Women's Year it appears that America will enter its bicentennial "without an official United States statement that women are entitled to equal rights." It was a reference to failure to achieve the required three-fourths ratification by the states of the Equal Rights Amendment.

Then she listed some of the negatives in the women's cause: Only three women legislators of 185 elected to state and federal legislative office in California; only about 25 women among 800 judges in the state; about 3 per cent women in Civil Service middle and lower-middle management positions and among U.S. Senate employees, women receiving one-half to three-fourths the salaries of men in similar posts.

On the hopeful side, Ms. O'Neill noted that Tunney and Congresswoman Yvonne Burke have sponsored legislation, passed unanimously by the Post Office Committee, to open the Civil Service system to part-time employees.

It would create about a half-million such jobs in five years, according to Ms. O'Neill, opening up the prospect for women of combining careers and homemaking.

She said recent creation of the Commission on the Status of Women in Los Angeles may upgrade employment for women throughout the state.

She called for the election of more women to office not only because they represent half of the human race but because, for today's young people, it will favorably "change the notion of future generations about what is possible."

Such chances will get a boost from California's Democratic party leadership, Ms. O'Neill believes. She noted that the party's executive committee has recommended that the official party be governed henceforth by equal co-chairs, one man and one woman.

Further, the party intends to assist such women candidates with campaign funding as a part of its affirmative action program, she said.

Ms. O'Neill finally suggested a change in California's age-old slogan about "Give us men to match our mountains." She would substitute, "Give us men and women to match our problems."

Special Olympics

The California Special Olympic Games for approximately 2,500 mentally disadvantaged children begins today in swimming and diving, track and field competition.

The track and field competition will be staged at UCLA's Drake Stadium, while the swimming and diving events will be held at Santa Monica's municipal pool.

The purpose of the Special Olympics is to contribute—through positive experiences in sports—to the physical, social and psychological development of the mentally disadvantaged.

The children attending the state games have qualified from approximately 20,000 children throughout California who have competed in 300 local meets that were held in April and May.

California will send a delegation of 90 athletes—to be selected following the meet—to the International Special Olympic Games at the University of Central Michigan at Mt. Pleasant, Mich., August 8 and 9.

Replica of Dana's 'Before the Mast' ship due

A full-scale replica of the 19th Century sailing ship Pilgrim, described in Richard Henry Dana's classic seafaring tale "Two Years Before the Mast," is due to sail into Los Angeles Harbor Sunday afternoon.

The replica, also named Pilgrim, is to enter the outer harbor at about 3 p.m. and dock near the Ports O' Call Restaurant in San Pedro about an hour later.

A spokesman for Capt. Raymond E. Wallace of Rolling Hills said the square-rigged, two-master is to become a permanent floating museum with artifacts and mementos of seafaring days. The ship may one day be moved to Monterey, but its first home is to be in San Pedro, the spokesman added.

He said the 100-foot ship sailed last year from Gibraltar en route to California.

Crewmen aboard the original ship, however, faced the treacherous waters at Cape Horn around the tip of South America. The modern-day sailors took a short-cut through the Panama Canal.

Refugees receive gifts aplenty

Refugees rally for return

By GLENN LEIBOWITZ
Staff Writer

Long Beach area residents, moved by the plight of a Cambodian refugee family who lost most of what little they had to a burglar, have helped turn their despair to hope.

Their gifts of food, money and sympathy have acted as an antidote to a series of catastrophes which hit the family immediately after their arrival here May 6.

One 85-year-old Long Beach woman literally searched the family out in order to present them with her $100 donation.

Another disabled resident sent $10 and a note: "I have very little money, I am totally disabled and wished I was a millionaire, for then I would buy those people a home. Please give them this $10...I hope and pray that many people will do the same so that we can show them that not all of Long Beach is so rotten."

The unfortunate situation began two days after the Chev Tauch family moved into a small apartment at 1460 Gaviota Ave., May 11. A burglar stole two gold rings, two silver ankle bracelets, $125 in cash and a cassette tape recorder while the family slept.

The tape recorder was one of Tauch's prize possessions because he could play Cambodian music on it for his family the Tauch's arrived May 6.

Just prior to the burglary, the family had learned the husband's immediate family had all been slain in their home village.

But when people in Long Beach and Lakewood heard of the family's plight they began to replenish the Tauch's losses.

After the burglary, Tauch, 33, and his wife, Yok Lim, 31, began to wonder if Cambodia, even with its wartime strife, was not a safer, more hospitable place to live, according to Catherine Thor, 44, of 441 E. 56th St., who, with her husband, Lan, 35, is sponsoring the family.

The gifts of money, food, a small camera, clothes and "everything from corn flakes to toilet paper," according to Mrs. Thor, have convinced the family their first impressions were wrong.

The Tauch's, who have two sons, Bora, 3, and Sokha, 6, have opened a bank account with their new money, for they very much fear another burglary.

"Indeed, Chev told me he had three nightmares in a row (Thursday night) about another burglary," Mrs. Thor said.

She said the more than 20 contributions, some sent by mail and others brought in person by their donors, have erased the Tauch's worry about the decision to emigrate.

The donations, ranging from $1 to $25, add up to $250, Mrs. Thor said. The rundown of household items donated is too long to list.

Friday, as the donations continued to arrive, the family told Mrs. Thor "We never want to leave America."

Home ransacked

Burglars who pried a window to gain entry to the apartment of Terry Gillingham, 320 Maine Ave., took household items valued at $837.

FT. CHAFFEE, Ark. (UPI) — About 80 refugees who want to return to Vietnam demonstrated for eight hours Friday in hopes of speeding up their repatriation, and other refugees who do not want to go home for a time planned a counter demonstration.

Late in the day administrators assured the repatriates they would be moved to Camp Pendleton, Calif., next week. The demonstration was ended and plans for a hunger strike today and violence Sunday were delayed.

Lee Minh Tan, 44, called off the demonstration, but said if the group was not flown to Pendleton Tuesday they would demonstrate again.

The repatriates were to have been flown to Camp Pendleton Friday, but the transfer was delayed because the planes were being used to transfer other refugees from Guam to the United States.

Donald McDonald, civilian coordinator at Chaffee, told the demonstrators they would be transferred Tuesday. He urged them to be patient and stop protesting.

David Arnold, a United Nations representative trying to arrange the repatriation, met with the demonstrators after McDonald. Arnold said he told them "if there is no plan here by Tuesday, I'll demonstrate with you."

Nguyen My, 44, a spokesman for the second group of refugees, had called the demonstrators Viet Cong "agents" and urged they be separated from the other refugees at the post.

"They (the demonstrators) do not represent the majority of the refugees in this camp," said My, a barracks leader. "We fear their action has affected our future relocation, and we don't accept their actions."

"In my opinion, they are VC agents," said My.

Tan denied the demonstrators were Communists.

"If we were Communists, we would never come to U.S., or if we were Communists we would stay in U.S. and send information back to Vietnam," he said. "We are not Communists. We just love our country and want to return."

My said some of the refugees who want to return to Vietnam have coerced other refugees into filling out repatriation forms by threatening the safety of their relatives in Vietnam.

"Some of them were forced to fill out repatriation documents," My said. "They said if they didn't fill out the paper, the people who go back will renounce our presence over here and do harm to our relatives in Vietnam."

Arnold and McDonald said they were aware of those stories.

"We've done everything possible to filter out those who may have been pressured," said Arnold. He noted the list of Vietnamese at Ft. Chaffee who wanted to return to Vietnam had once been as high as 235. Now it is down to 183.

Col. Joe Rogers, Army information officer, said nothing would be done about the refugee demonstrators as long as they did not break the law.

"They're doing nothing illegal now," he said.

NELLIS AFB, Nev. (UPI) — An F111A fighter-bomber crashed and burned on the runway of this military base Friday as it attempted to land following a routine training mission.

The two crewmen ejected successfully. A spokesman for the Air Force said the two suffered back injuries and were taken to the base hospital.

The multimillion-dollar all-weather fighter was assigned to the 474th Tactical Fighter Wing.

Two squadrons of F111A's are based here and this week 10 more of the planes returned from Thailand where they have been assigned for the past 34 months. Military police sealed off the airstrip immediately after the crash.

'The Island' surrounded by lack of intensity and clarity

After the power and excitement of "Sizwe Banzi Is Dead," I was disappointed with its companion piece, "The Island," playing at the Mark Taper Forum. The same people wrote it and the same people play in it, but it lacks the vitality and bite of its tandem partner.

"The Island" presents two prisoners, presumably political prisoners although their transgressions is never made clear, incarcerated on an island off the coast of South Africa. They are two among many, but the play shows us only them, mostly in their cell, talking, talking.

Mostly what they talk about is the version of the trial of Antigone which they mean to present at the coming "concert" of prisoners. At the end they do present it and apparently make with it some kind of revolutionary statement that underscores the sort of sentiment that get them into prison in the first place. Perhaps there is in Antigone's defiance of the decrees of the state some analogy for South Africa of today, but the connection is tenuous at best and the play doesn't clarify the relationship.

The players, John Kani and Winston Ntshona, are accomplished performers and manage to sustain some interest in the proceedings. They are, however, better actors than they are playwrights, so their skill goes mostly for naught. Even the best acting can't make something out of a script that is fuzzy in its intentions.

What makes "Sizwe Banzi Is Dead" a vital piece of theatrical fare, even if it is somewhat deficient as a play, is the intensity of its outrage and the clarity of its statement of outrage. "The Island," unfortunately, has neither the intensity nor the clarity. That doesn't leave very much.

"Sizwe" plays again June 24-8, "Island" June 22 and 29.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Sunday

Your birthday today: This is your year for intellectual stimulation, continuing education and exploration. You may switch professions or adopt specialties within an already active vocation. Incentive for progress now is high and official recognition promised for consistent effort. Relationships become expansive and attachments less profound. Today's natives are sympathetic, at ease in public, tend to be serious.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Leave out relatives and casual acquaintances; stay near home base with one or a few chosen companions. Indulge sentimental whims, but take time to make plans for the future.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): No one agrees with your budgeting or figures, although everyone likes your spirit. Take advantage of any opportunity for special advice or introductions to scholarly people.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): However provoking your response to criticism or opposition must be moderate if you want to have a successful day. Keep travel to a minimum; bring others with you where possible.

Cancer (June 21-July 21): Watch those financial details and measurements, particularly if you have to work. Information is incomplete, confused and overstated. Social and romantic moves are favored.

Leo (July 22-Aug. 22): There's much potential friction among friends who know just enough of your affairs to make comments. Introductions and new contacts fare very well. Avoid any sort of a gamble.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Sustain your public image by doing what is expected of you. Check out any news before acting on it. Impromptu excursions and entertainment are fun; just don't overdo your share.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Concentrate on those you really care about; don't bring outsiders into your circle today. Travel for pleasure and leave business for the office. Take all things in moderation!

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Talk about money, but don't do anything drastic about it. Work off various moods in competitive outdoor games. Line up your coming week later in the day.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't say that extra word! The argument that starts now will last forever. Be creative, but realize that you overestimate and think in unrealistically large dimensions.

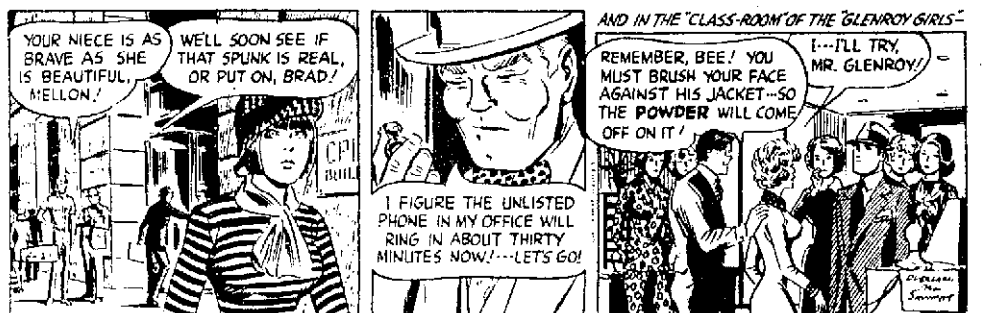

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Impulse leads you to clash with those around you over trivia. Where you can go along with them, do so. Improving your home arrangements is a good area for concern and action.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your sense of humor helps set values as you seek practical expression of your theories. Travel a bit and find sympathetic people. The free things in life seem better when shared.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Patience! Tantrums mellow into cooperation. Plan business deals, but don't start anything yet. Other factors must fall into place first. Have alternative plans ready.

5,146 forms
Bureaucratic
'way' filled

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer
Former assistant Treasury secretary Murray L. Weidenbaum tells about the owner of a small manufacturing firm who once complained to federal officials about all the paperwork he had to do to comply with government regulations.

IT WASN'T the only tale he told in what otherwise sounded like a litany of business frustration. Take the case of Marlin Toy Products of Horicon, Wis.

The pellets understandably prompted the Food and Drug Administration in 1972 to place the products on its ban list because of the agency's concern for the safety of children who might play with the toys. For it was obvious that if the toys cracked, the pellets would fall out and the children might swallow them.

To correct the situation, Marlin recalled the toys and redesigned the line to eliminate the pellets. By this time, though, the Consumer Product Safety Commission had been formed. And in issuing its own ban list, the new agency mistakenly included the Marlin products.

Weidenbaum said that when the error was called to the agency's attention, however, it replied that "it was not about to recall 250,000 lists 'just to take one or two toys off.'"

THE UPSHOT, said Weidenbaum, was that Marlin was forced out of the toy business and had to lay off 75 per cent of its work force.

Weidenbaum couldn't help but see a certain irony in the fact that a government agency that specialized in ordering companies to recall their defective products had refused to recall its own defective list.

"A more humorous instance of the (commission's) failure to abide by its own standards involves the toy safety buttons which it intended to distribute in the fall of 1974 in an effort to make consumers more safety conscious," he said.

Only after producing 80,000 buttons, said Weidenbaum, did the commission learn that the buttons could be dangerous to children because they were covered with lead paint.

The agency could have saved itself a lot of trouble and embarrassment, he indicated, by testing the product before rather than after its production, as the commission's own regulations suggested.

But, THEN, the error was caught before public distribution of the buttons, and, as Weidenbaum put it (with a trace of sarcasm), all that was wasted were resources and tax dollars.

THE FACT IS, said the former Treasury official, it is unrealistic to assume that government regulation is invariably based on wise and benign administration. There's a great deal of "waste, bias and stupidity" involved—not to mention "concentration on trivia, conflict among the regulators and, worst of all, arbitrary and uncontrolled power," he said.

Which is not to say that government action is not needed at all, he added. "A society, acting through government, can and should...protect consumers against rapacious sellers, individual workers against unscrupulous employers and future generations against those who would waste the nation's resources."

The question is not one of whether there should be regulation or not, he said, but how much regulation and in what manner. For government regulation today is not only burgeoning, said Weidenbaum. It is imposing an enormously costly burden of paperwork on business.

"THE LONGER IT takes for some change to be approved by a federal regulatory agency—a new product or a more efficient production process—the less likely that the change will be made," he said.

"Professor William Wardell of the University of Rochester Medical School," said Weidenbaum, "has shown that as a result of the more liberal policy in the United Kingdom toward the introduction of new drugs, Britain has experienced clearly discernible gains" over the United States in the drug field.

Weidenbaum put the public cost of government regulation in this country at approximately $2 billion a year. But that cost is small compared to the cost to business, he said.

According to the former Treasury official, individual and business firms spend "over 130 million man-hours a year" filling out one or more of the "5,146 different types of approved forms."

"SOCIETY SHOULD take a new and hard look at the existing array of government controls over business," he concluded.

"A substantial effort should be made to eliminate those controls that generate excessive costs," Weidenbaum suggested, moreover, that the solutions should enlarge rather than reduce the role of the private sector.

QUALITY CONTROL: THE NAME OF THE GAME AT CRAIG CORP. President Peter Behrendt, left, Kei Minato, Tomoharu Suzuki on QC 'line'

Craig Corp.'s flexibility keeps it 'taped' forward

The president of the firm is just as likely to check the quality control line as he is to review accounts receivable.

"I believe in visibility," Peter Behrendt said at Craig Corp.'s Compton facility at 921 W. Artesia Blvd. "The electronics business is one that can submerge you if you don't keep up. That starts in your plant—whether you have 165 people like we do here or 1,650."

CRAIG MARKETS nationally Craig-designed tape recorders, car stereos, portable calculators, office equipment and electronic teaching devices.

"Fundamentally we deal with tape and our largest selling item is a line of car stereos and tape players. We have about 12 per cent of the field," Behrendt said.

Craig, however, does not manufacture any of its equipment. All of it is made in Japan.

The company works with 15 manufacturers and owns, to a major degree the tooling.

The shipments arrive in Compton and are gone over, item by item, on the quality control line.

Behrendt pointed out some auto stereos that had not passed and said they would be fixed before distribution.

"WE DON'T SEND all of these shipments through the line to be approved routinely," Behrendt said. "The workers seem to know what 'soft spots' to look for and know, too, that management is 100 per cent there."

"Distributors don't like faulty merchandise and neither does the consumer. I would be unhappy with faulty merchandise and a stereo buff wants his equipment to be right from the start," Behrendt said.

The president estimated that 70 per cent of the auto stereo field was in the 17-25 youth market, and "that market is most discerning."

With 80 per cent of its sales consumer items, Craig's quality emphasis has kept it out of the pain a majority of electronic firms are suffering.

Wealthier make move to country

By DALE F. MEAD
Ridder News Service

MENLO PARK—The unprecedented "back-to-the-country" movement may subject small towns to the same population pressures that have made cities unpopular.

So warns a policy research analyst who co-authored a report for the federal government, outlining why Americans for the first time have reversed the traditional migration from farm to city.

To break away from the pattern of big city deterioration, Americans are going to have to stop letting economic forces shape decisions, and experiment with non-material goals, according to the expert from Stanford Research Institute.

(NSF), attempting to explain why U.S. citizens are returning to small towns for the first time in history.

The small towns to which they are flocking may themselves be threatened by the same forces that have made large urban areas unattractive, he suggests.

"The experience of New York, for example, is very curious," he says. "It's creating problems at both ends. People are going to places like Boulder, Colo., and are pressing its holding capacity to the limit."

"This report, as much as anything, is a plea for a non-economic rationale for the planning of our cities," Elgin explains.

"Because we have ignored non-economic qualities in the large cities, people are seeking areas where that ignorance has not taken place."

"But if you take a small town and let it grow, it's going to be subjected to the same forces."

Industry Week

Search on for protein

CLEVELAND — The prospect of a world food supply crisis is spurring development of a new food industry — one that is so different that neither it nor its products will resemble those of today, Industry Week reported.

Many of these development efforts are aimed at finding new sources of protein, which is likely to be the first material to fall to the critical supply level.

Some of the most promising new sources of it seem more likely to come from industry than from agriculture, the magazine for managers said.

THE FOUR most likely sources of the needed protein are leaves, fish, oil (soy, safflower) seeds, and single cell protein (SCP). It now looks as though several hundred thousand tons of SCP annually.

British Petroleum Co. Ltd., for example, operates two large plants, and France's Laveria installation makes 20,000 tons a year. The Italian Chemical Co.'s plant on Sardinia will soon produce 100,000 tons a year.

ANOTHER plant is operating at Reggio di Calabria at the toe of Italy's boot, and Russia is rumored to be constructing a 200,000 ton per year plant. And there will be more.

There are other ways to skim SCP from raw materials.

One large petroleum company makes it directly from methane, and another one is operating a pilot plant which grows edible SCP on ethyl alcohol, Industry Week said.

Protein is essential to life, the magazine pointed out. All tissue, except fat, is made of it.

SCP sources are plentiful. Years ago, a French research team discovered that yeast microorganisms will grow on waxy paraffins in petroleum residue. Using one type (called gas-oil), some plants are already producing several hundred thousand tons of SCP annually.

British Petroleum Co. Ltd., for example, operates two large plants, and France's Laveria installation makes 20,000 tons a year. The Italian Chemical Co.'s plant on Sardinia will soon produce 100,000 tons a year.

Milk carton 'squared away'
Carnation to test 'flip-n-sip' in Oakland

An innovative new "Flip-N-Sip" milk carton which has a built-in straw will be test marketed in Oakland during the fall school semester by Carnation Co.'s fresh milk division.

According to Ross Mainwaring, Western Director and General Manager for Carnation, the "Flip-N-Sip" carton is expected to cause a major change in the milk and beverage industry.

The carton is opened by pulling a tape to rotate the straw attached inside into an upright position for drinking. This allows dairymen to ship a greater number of cartons than the present gable-roof type.

chine will be installed in Carnation's Oakland facility. The machine was developed by FMC Corp. under contract to Nolex Corp.

A spokesman for Nolex Corp. said, "This will be a truly representative field test of the new carton, permitting ideal evaluation."

A dairy industry spokesman estimated that nearly 10 billion single-serve milk cartons will be used this year. In 1974 the U.S. Department of Agriculture's school breakfast, lunch and special milk program alone used 5.3 billion milk cartons in individual serving sizes.

to "Flip-N-Sip's" rectangular shape, the Nolex Corp. spokesman said it uses substantially less paperboard; simplifies hygienic safeguards; eliminates handling, sorting and dispensing straws required for single-use cartons; and its built-in straw facilitates drinking.

The "Flip-N-Sip" machine uses flat paperboard blanks made from standard polyethylene-coated milk container board. A Nolex spokesman said it affixes the straw, forms, heat seals, inserts and fills the completed carton in one continuous operation at a rate of 200 per minute in the half-pint or one-third-quart size.

Half of motor vehicles recalled in nine years

By EDWARD S. LECHTIZIN

DETROIT (UPI) — The brand new Cadillac had just rounded a curve at 25 miles an hour when an air bag—a device designed to save lives—popped out of the steering wheel and exploded in the driver's face.

He was alone and was able to bring the car to a safe stop. But the force of the inflating air bag left him with a puffed lip, some scratches and a surprised look. Air bags are supposed to inflate only in accidents.

Within a month of that incident in Dayton, Ohio, General Motors issued a recall notice for 2,005 of the expensive 1974 and 1975-model Cadillacs equipped with the safety device to make sure it doesn't happen again. The problem was easily fixed — simply change the routing of one electrical wire that had caused a short circuit.

It's still too early to know how many of the Cadillac owners who paid $225 and $300 for the safety option will have them repaired. If past experience is any indication, most will want to fix the defect and not be surprised by accidentally inflating air bags.

wheeled vehicles. That's about half the cars sold in the nine-year period.

Only a small number of the recalled vehicles actually had safety defects and many of those have never even been checked by dealers, much less repaired.

In its report to the Senate Commerce Committee, the General Accounting Office said that in 298 recall campaigns involving more than 19 million vehicles, only 33.8 per cent, or about 6.5 million, were even brought into dealerships for inspection.

"ONE REASON appears to be a lack of fear like 'it can't happen to me,' on the part of car owners," one industry official explained. "They don't feel the danger is great enough to bother taking the extra time to have their cars checked."

Another reason may be the law itself. If auto companies don't agree they have safety-related defects, they won't pay to repair the problem or even notify owners.

The government has gone to court several times trying to force a company, mainly GM, to notify owners of what it considered safety-related defects. But even if the government did win in court, the most that would happen is the notification letter, not a recall.

Congress last fall came close to approving a so-called "Lemon Law" that would have forced manufacturers and dealers to repair defects whether or not the companies agreed with the decision. But it got lost in the shuffle of congressional work to remove the controversial seat belt-ignition interlock system.

UNTIL THERE is a change in the law, automakers will continue to notify owners when they decide there is a safety-related defect. When there is no agreement on whether a defect actually exists, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration will go on issuing public statements of what it considers defects.

In the largest recall ever — 6.7 million 1965-66 GM cars and trucks — only 44.3 per cent actually had new engine mounts installed. If those rubber mounts broke, the engine could lift up, shift and pull the car out of control.

GM says, however, that besides the 2,962,214 cars and trucks actually repaired it has accounted for another 1,294,582 which are no longer in service. That brings the total repaired or accounted for to 63.7 per cent, a fairly common average for cars that old.

On the other hand, GM already has an 80.2 per cent completion figure for a recall announced in February of 1974 involving 1.3 million cars with possibly defective power brake systems.

FORD MOTOR Co.'s largest recall involved grommets — an inexpensive piece of plastic used to help anchor shoulder belts.

Ford recalled 4.1 million cars at a time when shoulder belts were separate from seat belts and were being used by fewer than 1 per cent of drivers. Only 18 per cent of the cars have ever been repaired.

TeleVues Burt and William Lancaster open miniseries about Moses

By BOB MARTIN

TV-Radio Editor

Fifteen years ago, Burt Lancaster won an Oscar as the fire-eating, hypocritical evangelist in the movie "Elmer Gantry," based on the Sinclair Lewis novel.

Tonight he comes to the tube as the prophet Moses in a new CBS miniseries, "Moses — the Lawgiver," which will replace "The Carol Burnett Show" for six Saturday evenings this summer on Channel 2, from 10 to 11.

Burt will have the leading role on five subsequent Saturdays, but will be seen only briefly tonight. The opening episode focuses on Moses as a young man, and Lancaster's son, William, plays the young Moses.

The six one-hour drama specials follow the course of the Biblical story, starting with the enslavement of the Israelites by King Ramses II in the 13th century before Christ and continuing through their long and difficult exodus from Egypt to the Promised Land.

An Italian-English production, "Moses — the Lawgiver" was filmed in Israel and in a Rome studio. The filming began about two years ago and was interrupted by the "Yom Kippur War" in Israel. The project was completed a year ago — at a reported cost of $6 million.

"Moses" features an international cast. The stars, in addition to Lancaster, are English actor Anthony Quayle as Aaron, the brother of Moses; Swedish actress Ingrid Thulin as their sister, Miriam, and Greek actress Irene Papas as Zipporah, wife of Moses.

British author Anthony Burgess, who wrote "A Clockwork Orange," and Italian writer Vittorio Bonicelli, who gained an Oscar nomination for his screenplay of "The Garden of the Finzi-Continis," were among the four writers of the script.

The emphasis is not on spectacle, but rather on presenting the Biblical characters as real human beings. In other words, "Moses" is not your run-of-DeMille Biblical epic.

Plenty to smile about

Shirley Babashoff appears to be admiring her start of the 400 freestyle Friday at Belmont Plaza Olympic Pool, but smile came after the race was

Babashoff shatters record

By FRANK BURLISON
Staff Writer

It's obvious why Shirley Babashoff isn't looking ahead to the 1976 Summer Olympics. She's too busy breaking her world records.

The 1972 Olympian broke her own world record for the second time in as many days Friday, setting a new standard of 4:14.76 in the 400-meter freestyle at Belmont Plaza Olympic Pool during the third day of United States qualifying for the World Aquatic Championships in Cali, Colombia, next month.

The 18-year-old Fountain Valley resident, who broke her record in the 200 freestyle Thursday, overcame Kathy Heddy of New Jersey in the final five meters and surpassed her world best of 14:15.77, set during the AAU championships in Concord, Calif., last year.

Heddy, who had broken her American record in the 200 individual medley Wednesday, also went under the previous record, finishing in 14:15.57.

Babashoff said she knew Heddy had taken the lead in the final 100 meters.

"I saw Kathy out of the corner of my eye in lane three (Babashoff swam in lane five) and knew I'd have to finish strong to win the race," said Babashoff.

Shirley was asked if she was looking forward to the 1976 Olympics.

"I'm not thinking about Montreal right now," said Babashoff, who won silver medals in the 100 and 200 freestyle during the 1972 Olympics in Munich. "The only thing I'm looking forward to now is Cali."

Tim Shaw, a Thursday night graduate of Wilson High, didn't break any records Friday, but did record the world's fastest time this year in winning the 200 backstroke in 2:05.44.

Shaw, who broke his world mark in the 400 freestyle Thursday, was in fourth place at the half-way mark of the race before overpowering the field over the last 100 meters.

"I felt dead the last half of the race," said Shaw, who will compete in the 1500 freestyle tonight.

Weight loss takes its toll: Chacon KO'd in 2

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

"In the first round," said Bobby Chacon, "I knew I was in for a long evening. It turned out to be a short one."

So the World Boxing Council's featherweight championship passed from the Southland's most popular fighter to Ruben Olivares, the athletic idol of Mexico, on a second-round knockout at the Forum Friday night.

At 23, Chacon appears to have little hope of ever getting it back after his most recent ordeal of squeezing under the division's 126-pound limit.

Although the Sylmar chicken rancher checked in at 124½ at Friday morning's weigh-in, the drop from 148 pounds of soft living since his last defense left him so weak that almost anybody could have knocked him over with a feather — in this case, the new feather champion, Olivares, 28, and for the fourth time claimant to a world title.

To the delight of some and distress of others among the 18,770 who bought out the Forum for a California title fight gate record of $410,863, all the fireworks came from south of the border.

Taking his cue from the explosions that punctuated the Mexican national anthem, Olivares tested Chacon's strength early and, finding Bobby wanting, simply waded in for a quick kill.

The former two-time bantamweight king and now two-time feather champ — the only man to beat Chacon in Bobby's 28 fights — wrestled his man around in a purposeful pirouette the first time they came to grips.

"Twice, I held onto him," Ruben explained through an interpreter.

"That was my way of telling if he was strong enough."

"My plan was to box him for five rounds and tire him out, then knock him out. But the first time I hit him I knew I had him."

Olivares won the first round, scoring with tentative long-range blows that Chacon, lacking his usual sharpness, was unable to counter.

Early in the second round Olivares, sensing his 71st knockout in a 78-5-1 career, shook Chacon's head with a left hook, stopped him in his tracks with a right, then pounded home a crushing combination climaxed by a solid left that left Chacon stretched out on the deck, his head resting on the lower red velvet rope.

Angels pull one out with four runs in 11th

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

Those who happened by Anaheim Stadium Friday night really weren't hallucinating.

It did happen.

The Texas Rangers scored three times in the 11th inning—but please notify Robert Ripley—the Angels came back in unbelievable fashion with four and won a wild long war from the Rangers, 12-11.

It took four hours and 46 minutes along with 23 runs and 37 hits and three errors to find a winner.

It finally came when Mike Cabbage, who began as a hero with a first-inning grand slam home run, turned to a goat with a two-out error in the 11th on Jerry Remy's grounder to permit Rudy Meoli to carry home the winning run.

All seemed lost when Tom Grieve capped a three-run 11th for the Texans with a two-run homer but the Angels, who earlier had eradicated a six-run deficit, overcame the three-run lead on doubles by John Doherty and Morris Nettles, a walk and run-scoring singles by Meoli—whose error in the 11th made all the Ranger runs unearned—and Dave Collins.

Both Meoli and Collins hits came with two out and for Collins, the rabbit from Rapid City, S.D., it culminated a night which saw him collect a triple, double and three singles in addition to driving in two runs and stealing a base.

The Angels, incredibly enough, arose from the ashes of a six-run Texas outpouring in the first inning.

Strom beats Sutton

Claim Dodger ace doctoring ball

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—The Don Sutton "does he or doesn't he" controversy flared anew Friday night at San Diego Stadium.

But Dodger manager Walter Alton wasn't as concerned with what Sutton was—or wasn't—doing to the baseballs as he was with what San Diego's Brent Strom was doing with them.

The one-time USC Trojan hurled his first National League victory, dispatching the Dodgers, 4-1, on four hits, one of them Steve Garvey's eighth homer of the season that stretched his hitting streak to seven games.

The loss dropped the Dodgers three games behind Cincinnati in the National League West, severed their winning streak at four and prevented Sutton from becoming the majors' first 12-game winner.

Sutton's nemesis, Willie

Dodger of Day
STEVE GARVEY homered for Dodgers' only run in 2-1 loss to Padres.

McCovey, slugged a bases-empty home run in the fourth inning that tied the score, 1-1.

As Sutton went out to pitch the sixth inning San Diego manager John McNamara angrily approached plate umpire Lee Weyer, complaining that Sutton was applying a foreign substance to the baseballs.

"With a beak like this," he said later, tapping his ample nose, "I sure as hell can smell pine tar. Every ball that came out of the game had pine tar on it."

Weyer said, "He (McNamara) wanted me to go out and check Sutton and I wouldn't do it because I didn't see any balls that were loaded up with anything. For all I

ZAP! Watson bolts to front in rainy Open

Combined News Services

MEDINAH, Ill.—Tom Watson is composed, self-contained and supremely confident he can avert the dismal, ego-destroying collapse that cost him the U.S. Open crown a year ago.

"I have great confidence," the articulate, intelligent young man said Friday after his storm-delayed start in the second round. After some questioning by U.S. Golf Association officials about his refusal to tee off at his appointed time, Watson went out and fired a three-under-par 68 that gave him an Open record-matching 135 for the first two rounds of this 75th championship.

"I am more sure of myself and my ability to handle the pressure," said Watson, who held the third-round lead then blew it with a horrendous 79 over the last 18 holes last year.

"I have a game plan for the last two rounds. I can't look back. I can only play my game, one shot at a time. The first time I'll be able to look back is on the 18th green on Sunday."

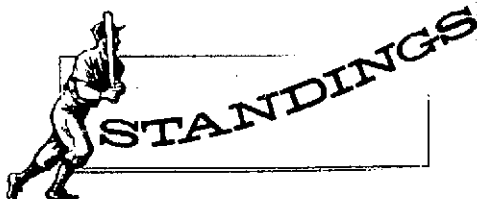

Jack Nicklaus had a different view of the situation after his 70 and an even-par 142.

"If you look at history," said Nicklaus, one of the most feared competitors the game has ever known, "par after two rounds of the U.S. Open is not a bad score. You can make up seven strokes in a hurry."

"BUT I DON'T look at it that way. The way I look at it is that there's only six guys in front of me, and that's not bad. My position is not bad at all."

Watson, who shared the first-round lead with Pat Fitzsimons, assumed sole

DEBBY STEWART L.B. GOLF QUEEN—BY AN EYELASH

BY DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

Debbi Stewart of Long Beach survived a rules confrontation on the final hole Friday to tumble Dayna Benson of Anaheim, 1 up, in a tense, almost flawless final match of the Long Beach City Women's Golf Championship at Recreation Park.

The outcome was delayed nearly 15 minutes when Benson claimed that Stewart did not re-mark her ball in the proper place on the winning putt. If the claim were upheld, Benson would have won the hole and forced a sudden-death playoff.

Stewart clearly did not replace her ball after spanning it to avoid Benson's putting line. But Dayna had shaken hands, conceding defeat, and had walked perhaps 20 feet off the green before she either realized her opponent's mistake or was advised of it.

She then approached Debbi, told her of the error and claimed the hole. Stewart's father, who caddied for his daughter, pointed out that it was too late to correct the error because Dayna had left the green.

The match referee, Ruth Miller, consulted with the rules committee. After searching through the Rules of Golf, they found the rule clearly stated that the hole must be called before the players leave the green.

Dayna, frustrated by missing a two-foot putt that would have given her the 18th hole and a tie, said, "I knew Debbi didn't re-mark, but I thought I could call it before reaching the next tee."

The controversy took some of the edge off a beautifully played match which neither player deserved to lose. Putting was the difference and, in the end, the missed two-footer was the coup d'état.

Only three holes were exchanged and none after the 10th. There were no bogies by either girl from the fifth hole until the 18th. Twice they posted matching birdies.

Benson had many more opportunities. She missed three four-foot putts, an 18-inch and the ultimate two-footer. Yet she medalled 76, one-over women's par. Stewart shot 75.

Debbi won the first and third holes and that was it. Dayna's only win came on the 10th when she dropped a two-putt birdie. Stewart made her only bad wood shot of the day on that hole, hitting a 3-wood into the trees.

The 11th was halved in birdies, with Debbi knocking in a 15-footer after Benson holed one twice that length. Both missed birdies inside 10 feet on the 13th and 14th and both chipped poorly to squash birdie chances on the 17th.

control with his seven-under-par total on the 7,032 yards of trees, traps and subtle troubles that make up Medinah Country Club.

The demanding layout offered still another terror Friday—lightning.

"It's nothing to fool around with," Watson said. "You're talking about your life. I have a lot more U.S. Opens to play in, but I have only one life."

With that in mind, he invoked the lightning rule and declined to tee off at his appointed time.

He was questioned about the decision by two USGA officials, including executive director P.J. Boatrigh.

"THEY QUESTIONED whether the lightning was close enough for the rule to be invoked," Watson said. "We talked about it and they went out on the first tee and ZAP! there it hit. Mr. Boatrigh apologized to me later."

They also called a 35-minute halt to play during a violent storm that brought rain and lightning. The shower also killed the fierce, 90-degree temperatures and matching humidity that plagued the early starters and sent the legendary Arnold Palmer stumbling back in the pack, limp and exhausted from the heat he called the worst in a decade.

Ben Crenshaw, a young man who has been in a long, disturbing slump since that sensational start to his pro career a couple of seasons ago, was alone in second place with a 68 and a 138 total.

Fitzsimons, first-round co-leader at 67, was ambushed by a watery double bogey on the 17th hole, slipped to a 73 and was five strokes off the lead at 140.

PALMER, the 45-year-old giant who still draws the game's largest, most loyal galleries, blew to a 75 and 144. All his trouble—and it was such familiar trouble—was concentrated in a few holes early in the round when the heat was at its worst.

"It got to me," Palmer said, his shirt drenched in sweat and a haggard, hounded look on the famous face. "Physically, I don't think the heat has got to me that much since Washington (1964 U.S. Open at Congressional CC in Washington, D.C.)."

It took a score of 149 to qualify and among those getting under the wire was former Long Beach State standout Beau Baugh (77-72-149).

The list of casualties included ancient 63-year-old Sam Snead, still seeking the one big title that has eluded him in a 40-year career; former American and British Open tit holder Tony Jacklin of England, former U.S. Open winner Orville Moody, onetime Masters champion Charles Coody and former PGA king Bobby Nichols.

Quarterback Pat Haden and pass receiver John McKay, stars of the University of Southern California's Rose Bowl champions, signed multi-year professional contracts Friday with the Southern California Sun of the World Football League.

Details of the contracts were not announced. Sun officials said both players will report today when the WFL team begins practice.

Haden will play only about half the season before leaving for Oxford University in England where he will be a Rhodes Scholar.

He said, however, that he expects to be able to play the entire 1976 season.

Both Haden and McKay also had been drafted by National Football League clubs—the quarterback by the Rams and the receiver by Cleveland.

While performing for McKay's father as collegians, the pair helped USC post a 31-3-2 record. Haden established a career touchdown passing record with 33.

In addition to his football exploits, Haden compiled a 3.74 grade point average.

McKay led the Pacific-8 Conference with seven touchdown catches in 1974 and caught 18 during his three-year career.

The Haden-to-McKay combination began at Bishop Amat High School. The last time it clicked USC scored a last-minute touchdown in the 1975 Rose Bowl game. Seconds later Haden hit Shelton Diggs with a conversion pass that brought the Trojans their 18-17 victory over Ohio State.

Watts Games begin today for youths

The 8th Watts Summer Games begin today at various locations throughout Los Angeles County.

More than 6,000 boys and girls of junior and senior high school age are expected to take part. Competition today will center on football, basketball, soccer and volleyball.

The Coaches All-America game kicks off the lengthy season at 6 p.m. (PDT) with a capacity crowd at Texas Tech's Jones Stadium expected along with a national television audience.

The West attack is likely to be made up chiefly of the power running of Texas A&M's Don Hardeman, a top pick of the Houston Oilers.

Fencers open U.S. nationals

The United States fencing championships begin today at the International Hotel in Los Angeles.

Competition, which starts at 8:30 a.m., will continue through June 29. Results will determine the United States squad for the 1975 Pan-American Games in Mexico City in October.

SWEET SWINGERS

CONCENTRATION displayed by Dayna Benson (above) and Debby Stewart was reflected in tense 1-up match won by Miss Stewart Friday at Recreation Park in finals of the Long Beach City Women's Golf Championships. Staff Photos by ROGER COAR placed their drives perfectly on the 18th. Dayna, hitting first, drove a wood 10 feet beyond the green. Feeling the pressure, Debby came off a 5-iron and hit the trap—the only time either girl was in a bunker.

Stewart came out to within 12 feet and Benson putted downhill, two feet long. Debby's approach was one foot short and that's when she spanned her ball to get out of Dayna's line.

When Dayna pulled her putt left, Debby easily tapped in the match winner. A handshake followed and nothing was said for two minutes until Dayna realized, or was told, that Debby had not returned her ball to its original position.

It was an impressive victory for Stewart, a Wilson High junior. She eliminated two women, Harriet Glanville and Mildred Stanley, who had won this tournament a total of 10 times, and she was a master at saving two and three-foot putts Friday for par.

Debby works at least two hours a day on the practice tee and has added considerable length to her drives. Her dad and 14-year-old sister, Marty, are also low handicappers.

Kathy Ahern fires 5-under 67 for lead

PLYMOUTH, Ind. (AP) — Kathy Ahern shrugged off a two-year slump Friday and took the first round lead in the $40,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Hoosier Classic with a five-under-par 67 at steamy Plymouth Country Club.

Miss Ahern, 26, played the back nine first in four-under 32 and, tiring from the mid-90s heat and intense humidity, finished with a 35. She had five birdies and no bogeys on her round.

Following closely was longtime tour veteran Marlene Bauer Hagge with a 68. Mrs. Hagge, 41, who also said the heat bothered her a great deal on the back nine, fired five birdies and one bogey on the backside, then came home with a birdie and a bogey.

Laura Baugh and Amy Alcott are at 1-over-par 73.
